British Attitude Toward Japanese Tonnage Puzzles State Department

WASHINGTON-Behind the naval negotiations now under way in London is a lot more than a mere matter of Japanese tonnage. No matter what tonnage or ration the Japanese get, they will still pursue their militant policy in the Far East.

But what is more important—though not admitted by the State Department—is the question of British and American co-operation.

The United States and Great Britain together can block Japanese aggression. Singly they can't.

So far the co-operation between the two countries has been nil.

The alleged "alliance" so acclaimed at the time Herbert Hoover and Ramsey MacDonald sat on their log on the Rapidan, has disappeared in smoke. It evaporated not long after the British Labor Government was replaced by the present Tory regime.

During the Japanese invasion of Manchuria, Britain and the United States worked at complete cross-purposes. When Henry L. Stimson sent a note of protest to the Japanese Foreign Office, the British Ambassador went through the same notion.

But afterward he would call to say that his protest meant nothing.

During those days the old Anglo-Japanese alliance was as effective as if it never had been abrogated.

British Awakening

Since then, there has been a certain shift of British sentiment. Lancaster textile interests have wakened up to see their markets invaded by Japanese goods. In India, a bitter trade war has been waged over Japanese exports.

In Siam, Japanese are stirring up dissension against British domination over King Prajadhipok. That is one reason he is on the way out. The Japanese want control in order to build a canal through the Isthmus of Krim, thereby nullifying Britain's great Far Eastern stronghold—the Singapore Base.

The British also have received intimations that the Japanese have their eyes on Hongkong, and that wealthy British sphere of influence, the Yangtze Valley. To thwart this, Field Marshall Allenby and British Admirals held an important conference on a warship off Singapore.

But despite this British fear, there has been a definite indication that the British would work with the United States rather than with Japan.

State Department officials have searched for it, would welcome such a sign. But there is nothing concrete. Britain's game seems to be that of playing Japan off against the United States.

In London, the conferences are three-cornered—the Japanese with the British, the British with the United States, and the United States with the Japanese. No one knows exactly what one side says to the other.

In such an atmosphere nothing beyond publication of pious platitudes can be expected.

Two Plans

Upton Sinclair's EPIC plan, to "end poverty in California," has been widely publicized. But it is not the only program of its kind in the United States.

Ohio also has a plan, which while little known beyond its boundaries, has the virtue of having been in successful operation for over a year.

While aimed at the same general objective—creating employment for the workless—the two plans differ drastically in fundamental economics.

EPIC, as conceived by Sinclair, would create a separate economy of the unemployed within the national economy.

That is, they would be supplied with factories, land, and other productive means, to feed, clothe, and house themselves. The hundreds of millions of dollars now being spent for this purpose would

POLICE JAIL SUSPECT IN STOLL CASE

Resembles Robinson, Jr., Pennsylvania Officers Say; Says He is Hitch-Hiker Enroute from Chicago; Questioning Continues

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 6.—A man resembling Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., sought as the kidnaper of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll of Louisville, Ky., was arrested here today after police broadcast an alarm for officers to be on the lookout for the hunted fugitive.

The arrested man, whose name was not learned immediately, said he was a hitch-hiker enroute from Chicago to Connellsville, Pa.

Brought to police headquarters, he was questioned and fingerprinted.

The man was picked up a few minutes after state police broadcast an order calling for the apprehension of the suspect.

QUESTIONED IN JAIL

Special details of the state police at Washington were enroute here to question the man. He was being grilled meanwhile by local authorities.

According to state police at Washington, Pa., the man got off a bus there and was hitch-hiking his way out of town when given a "lift" by Cecil O. Northrop who was enroute to Uniontown for a doctor's examination.

S. G. Krepp, judge of elections here, told International News Service that state police and local authorities were checking with Chicago officials on the man's hitch-hiking story.

JUSTICES OF PEACE ELECT J. HOOVER

A Pickaway-co unit of the Southern Ohio Justice of Peace association was formed at a meeting in the court room Monday evening with John S. Hoover, of Harrison-twp, named president. Other officers are Isaac Rossiter, Saltcreek-twp, vice president, and Z. L. Smith, Darbyville, secretary and treasurer.

The next meeting of the organization will be Nov. 13.

The organization is for justices of the peace, village mayors, constables and marshals. Its objectives include to obtain better qualified justices of the peace, to eliminate kangaroo courts, and to become better acquainted with the law.

ABDUCTION CHARGE REDUCED TO MINOR WEAPON COMPLAINT

A kidnaping charge had been reduced to carrying concealed weapons today with Albert Jones, an ex-convict arrested in Clarksburg, W. Va., last week to face the charge.

Jones was caught after taking Elva Collins, 16, to Clarksburgh. The girl's father charged abduction but when authorities learned the girl went willingly they had the abduction charge withdrawn. Jones carried a revolver when he went to the Collins home to take the girl with him, Sheriff Charles Radcliff reports, so that charge is the one officials believe will "stick."

Jones is now in the county jail.

Mace Has Troubles!

Grover Mace, of Tarlton, was in the county jail Tuesday for a couple of reasons. In the first place he has been unable to provide bond for an assault and battery charge pending against him before the next grand jury.

After being held in jail a while a charge of attempting to smuggle mail from the jail was filed against him. While awaiting release on bond in the assault case he was fined $50 and costs and sentenced to 30 days on the smuggling count.

CIVICS CLASS TOURS CITY FOR 3-MILL TAX

Members of the junior class in social civics made a house-to-house canvass of the city Monday with literature concerning the 3-mill levy. It is believed the issue which asks continuation of the 3-mill levy for five years will carry without difficulty.

Three Slain As Bullets End Parade

Leaders of Pennsylvania Republican Faction Jailed; Others May Die.

HAZELTON, Pa., Nov. 6.—Bloodshed that took a toll of three lives and was expected to claim two more victims ushered in the voting today in Pennsylvania's hectic election campaign.

The victims were shot down by a cross-fire of machine gun bullets and pistol fire as they marched through the main street of the small mining village of Kelayres near here last night.

State police held Joseph J. Bruno, a Republican political leader, and his nephew, Paul, and members of their families in connection with the killings.

Witnesses said it was from the two Bruno homes on opposite sides of the street that the deadly stream of fire poured down on the marchers as they paraded through the town, burning red flares and shouting cheers.

FORMER CHOIR SINGS AT CHURCH SERVICE

Dr. Lilly Directs Organization as Anthem Sung in 1915 is Repeated; Programs Continue

The Methodist church program Monday evening was devoted to reminiscences and music by the church's former choir under the direction of Dr. R. F. Lilley. Miss Anna Schleyer and Mrs. K. J. Herrmann played the organ.

The program was another in commemoration of the 150th anniversary of Methodism and the 25th anniversary of the present church structure. This evening will be known as "Young People' Night" with the subdistrict meeting of Epworth leagues scheduled. The county orchestra directed by Miss Betty Scothorn will play.

More than 30 persons reported to Dr. Lilly for choir duty with the anthem selected being "King of Glory" from a cantata done by the choir April 4, 1915.

The evening's speakers were Rev. L. C. McCandlish, Adelphi, whose subject was "The Church's Opportunity"; Rev. H. O. Harbaugh, who reminisced, and Mrs. Carl Ritz, who read the history of the church's music. Dr. W. C. L. Correll also had a part in the program.

MISSING GIRL, 14, IS FOUND

Details Concerning Disappearance, Discovery Withheld; Hunting Job, She Said.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Fourteen year-old Jane Merrell, object of a city-wide search since her disappearance in ragamuffin costume on Hallowe'en, was back at her home today after being found, according to reports, on 75th street between Second and Third avenues.

A mysterious ban on details of her return was clamped down by police who declined to vouchsafe any information concerning her whereabouts during the five day search. It was stated only that she had been found by Detective Edward Collins.

After questioning by police, Jane was taken to the home of her foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Merrell, in Forest Hills.

Police said the girl was found in a Manhattan rooming house.

Athough Jane had no more money her room rent was paid one week in advance.

Jane told detectives she had been seeking a job, but had been unable to secure one.

Huey Long's Libel Suit To Be Tried in 3 Weeks

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—The $500,000 libel suit of Gen. Samuel T. Ansell against Senator Huey P. Long (D) of Louisiana may be called up for trial in the District of Columbia supreme court within three weeks.

The U. S. Supreme court denied Long's claim of immunity because of his senatorial position. The feud between the two developed when Ansell was counsel for a senate committee, which investigated Louisiana election methods.

The District of Columbia court of appeals ruled circulation of speeches made by Long on the senate floor were subject to libel suit. Before the high court, Long's attorneys urged modification of the opinion. They contended they would go to trial with their case prejudiced. However, the high court made no reference to the modification plea.

Members of congress, the high court said, are exempt from "arrest" while attending congress. The word "arrest," however, the court held, cannot be construed to apply to service of summons in a libel suit.

Race For Governor Holds Interest of Buckeye Voters

COLUMBUS, Nov. 6.—Pivotal Ohio which two years ago returned a 74,000 majority for Franklin D. Roosevelt, went to the polls today to record a verdict on his "New Deal."

Concensus of political observers was that it would be in the President's favor, though probably not without some reservations.

Defeat of Republican Sen. Simeon D. Fess, who finds little to commend and much to abhor in the "New Deal," was predicted on all sides, with the betting here about 3 to 1 on ex-Gov. A. V. "Honest Vic" Donahey, Democrat.

Fess' defeat would be hailed by the Democrats as a great victory for the "New Deal," but Republicans prepared to attribute it largely to Donahey's tremendous personal popularity. They recalled that the only "100 per cent New Dealer" in the Democratic primary, Congressman Charles West, was badly trounced by the same Donahey.

WHAT OF GOVERNOR?

While they are passing judgment on Fess and Donahey, Ohio's two and a half million voters will elect either Clarence J. Brown, Republican, or Martin L. Davey, as governor for the next two years. They fought tooth and nail in a contest marred by frequent injection of personalities.

Both are veterans in the Buckeye political arena, Brown a former lieutenant governor and secretary of state, and Davey a former Democratic congressman from the normally Republican Fourteenth district. Brown was reported to be the favorite, but by a very slender margin which with an unusual show of strength Davey might easily upset.

The Democrats' anticipated success in the U. S. senatorial contest was expected to be tinctured by the loss of a few of their 18 congressional seats. Republicans, left with but six after the 1932 landslide, hoped to add at least four more today.

Their best bet appeared to be in the Eighteenth district where ex-Congressman Frank Murphy, Republican, is attempting a comeback at the expense of the Democratic encumbent, Lawrence Imhoff.

They also went out after the congressional scalp of Byron B. Harlan and Warren J. Duffey, Democratic incumbent in the

30 MILLIONS BALLOT TODAY

Survey of States Shows Activity on Various Fronts; Democrats Confident.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.— Some thirty million American voters went to the polls today in an election that will determine the character of the New Deal during the next two years—and to a certain extent re-make the political map of the country during that same period.

Election day found the Democrats exuding confidence; the Republicans merely hopeful.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Nov. 6.—President Roosevelt became, to all legal purposes, just plain Franklin D. Roosevelt of the village of Hyde Park today, as he prepared to go to the polls like millions of other Americans and vote.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 6. — The life of Lawrence G. Puchta, had been claimed on the very eve of election today by a pneumonia attack.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 6.—Upwards of 3,000,000 voters went to the polls today to settle California's most remarkable gubernatorial battle.

Interest of the nation and world centered on the verdict to be rendered by the California voters on the candidacy of Upton Sinclair, epic-Democrat, and his plan to "End Poverty in California."

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Fair weather promised an outpouring of 3,000,000 or more voters in Illinois today as the polls opened with Democratic leaders confidently predicting victory in the off-year election.

Interest throughout the state centered in the battles over congressional seats, which were the objects of furious campaigns that were waged until the eleventh hour. The governorship is not at stake.

WORLEY WOULD REDUCE CHARGES

COLUMBUS, Nov. 6.—An extraordinary session of city council today was set for Friday as Mayor Henry W. Worley launched a fight for reduction of rates charged by the municipal light plant so that it could compete with a privately owned utility.

Lowering of the charges by the municipal plant also may open the door to a $1,300,000 PWA loan to enlarge the plant, the mayor said. In a special message to council, he warned that the privately owned utility would "have the city at its mercy" if rates of the municipal plant are not reduced.

Meanwhile, Columbus voters today were balloting on a schedule of compromise rates offered by the private concern. If the compromise rate reductions are approved, and rates of the city plant remain the same, Mayor Worley said, the municipality operated concern will face loss of business.

HAUPTMANN'S LAWYER BUSY

Reilly Cheered After Conference; Starts From 'Scratch,' He Reports.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Edward J. Reilly, new defense counsel for Bruno Richard Hauptmann, was busy today building up a case for the man accused of killing the baby of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Reilly said, he was "starting from scratch," and borrowing no ideas from James M. Fawcett, his predecessor. Reilly intends to seek from Fawcett only the papers relating to the case.

The defense attorney was cheered today as a result of a conference with Hauptmann in the jail at Flemington, N. J., yesterday. On that visit, he was accompanied by C. Lloyd Fisher, Flemington representative for the defense.

Reilly said he found the accused man "cool, calm and collected."

ALL-NIGHT JOB EXPECTED FOR VOTING JUDGES

One O'clock Check-up Shows More Persons Voting Than in Primary

FAR AHEAD OF 1932

Late Returns Expected in Parts of Ohio

The election board was to face an all-night task, Tuesday, with election returns expected to start coming in about 9 o'clock. There are 38 precincts to report and all must be in before members of the board leave for their homes.

The county election board is headed by Mrs. G. G. Leist and its other members are T. J. Burgett, J. R. Hott and Russell Imler. Boyd Trout, clerk, is ill and his place is being taken by Lawrence J. Johnson, whose tabulations have always helped the board speed its results. Harry E. Weill, deputy clerk, will also be on the job.

The board's office is in the city building but it is impossible for individuals to receive returns there. Results will be available at the court house and at The Herald office.

RETURNS AVAILABLE

Election returns will be available late this evening at The Herald office where results will be tabulated as soon as they are received from the various precincts through the county.

It is urged that all telephone calls be confined to Phone No. 782.

More voters had visited the polls in Circleville at 1 p. m. Tuesday than either the primary in August or the presidential election in November, 1932. A check-up by The Herald disclosed 1,314 persons had cast ballots at 1 o'clock this year while in August only 1,165 had marched to the city's nine voting booths. In the presidential year, 1932, the number at the same time of day was 893.

Perfect weather and numerous contests were drawing the populace.

Although several of the various precinct officials believed their noon figures were behind the primary only one had fallen behind while another was tied with the primary mark.

The comparative figures follow:

	Today	Aug. 14	1932
1st North	162	121	93
1st East	216	172	141
1st West	120	113	95
2nd West	176	165	125
2nd East	140	140	104
3rd North	136	146	110
3rd South	108	88	51
4th North	140	130	90
4th South	116	90	84
Totals	1,314	1,165	893

No disorders of any kind had been reported to the election board office this afternoon. In several of the precincts, notably third north and second east, groups were standing in the streets for no apparent reason although every thing was going along smoothly on the election front.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 6.—If the vote in today's election is close, as it was expected to be in the gubernatorial race, the winner may not be determined until far after midnight.

HEAVY VOTE IN RURAL SECTIONS

COLUMBUS, Nov. 6.— A heavy rural vote in the election was forecast by fair weather throughout the state today.

According to W. H. Alexander, government forecaster here, the weather was generally fair with a warm sun slowly forcing the thermometer upwards. The high temperature of the day will be about 50 degrees, he said. The low point was 39.

"STOP BERWANGER" IS CRY TO OHIOANS

COLUMBUS, Nov. 6.—Pointing always toward Jay Berwanger, storm center of Chicago university's gridders, Coach Francis Schmidt today planned another defensive session for his Ohio State varsity against a freshman squad equipped with Maroon plays.

Yesterday the varsity and reserves battled through rain and mud in their practice session, with Schmidt laying the groundwork for his defensive tactics against the triple-threat star from Chicago.

The practice this week will be Schmidt's second week of planning for the Chicago game. All last week, although ostensibly scrimmaging for the Western Reserve clash at Cleveland, the Buckeye gridders were being drilled in plays for next Saturday.

PLAY 8 IN ROW

The invasion of Chicago marks the first of a series of three Big Ten conference games which will wind up Ohio State's schedule. Michigan and Iowa follow Chicago in succession, but the Maroons are expected to provide the greatest opposition.

Bud Cox, Sam Busich, and Frank Cumiskey all loom as terminal possibilities following the consignment of Trevor Rees, star end, to the hospital with a wrenched back and kidney ailment. Jack Smith, halfback with an injured knee, may not play Saturday. Trainer Tucker P. Smith said. Dick Heekin, driving halfback, was excused early from practice yesterday with an injured leg.

A victory for Ohio State in the Chicago game this year, the first clash of the two schools since 1927, would give the Buckeyes a total of five victories, two defeats and two ties in the nine games that the schools have played.

Grayson Scores for Stanford

Bobby Grayson, flashing halfback of the Stanford university eleven, is pictured dashing across the goal line for a touchdown in the annual game between Stanford and the University of California at Los Angeles. This goal helped Stanford to defeat their opponents by a score of 27 to 0 as 50,000 spectators watched.

TURLEY SECOND AMONG SCORERS

COLUMBUS, Nov. 6.—With 75 points to his individual credit, John Turley, the Ohio Wesleyan quarterback and triple-threat artist, today had increased his lead in Ohio collegiate scoring circles to 27 points and was in second place in the national roster.

The touchdown, extra point, and field goal which Turley scored in the game against Miami University last Saturday put him only four points behind Strutt, of Duquesne University, who is in the lead for national scoring honors with 79 points.

Figured on the average basis, however, Turley has scored 12½ points a game for six games, while Strutt, who has played in seven contests this season, has averaged only slightly more than 11 points a game.

Foster of Denison retained his second place position in the Ohio ranks by scoring a touchdown against Otterbein Saturday and making his score 48. Jenkins, also of Denison, crashed his way from ninth down to third place, by virtue of two touchdowns, to go into a tie with Goldsmith, of Baldwin-Wallace, at 42.

Bowling News

The Klever five, Washington C. H. women's ten pin team, made the Circleville Five step to win a 2264-2075 victory Monday evening on the Circleville Recreation alleys.

LORD JIM IS SOUGHT IN EUROPE, REPORT

COLUMBUS, Nov. 6.—European horsemen are eager to buy Lard Jim, America's foremost harness racing horse, it was disclosed here today by E. L. Mefford, Columbus sportsman and owner of the champion trotter.

Mefford revealed that he has received numerous cabled offers but that he has refused them all. "Lord Jim will be sold to the highest bidder," he said.

Mefford plans to put the horse on the auction block at the annual New York horse sale November 25 and it is expected that representatives of several foreign stable owners will be there prepared to bid high to take him to Europe.

Lord Jim's days as a harness racer in America are practically finished, but in Europe he would have two years of opportunity in numerous free-for-all events before being relegated to stud duty. Only a few free-for-alls have been staged in this country in recent years.

Another reason European stable owners are so anxious to secure Lord Jim, according to Mefford, is the fact that numerous trotters have been sold into export at private sales this year and Lord Jim is the only horse that has beaten them in races.

Mefford said that Lord Jim has cleaned up $25,000 in prizes in the last two years. This year, the horse won the famous Hambletonian and also the three-year-old championship crown.

Pickaway-twp chapter Future Farmers of America had initiation at its regular meeting, Monday night.

Seventeen members were present.

At the next meeting installation of officers for 1934 and 1935 will take place.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

CONFERENCES BEGIN

The conferences have started and the stock question is: "How many of them will there be before contracts are signed?"—It's the Dean boys and their salaries—Reports emanating from a meeting between Diz and Paul with President Sam Breadon, Monday, are that the big shot wants $25,000 and the younger but just as powerful sling-shotter is asking $15,000 for his second annual in the big show.

LIKE DREYFUSS

Maybe they'll get it and maybe they won't—Mr. Breadon is a tough customer, it is said, where salary boosts are to be discussed; he's even compared with the late Sam Dreyfuss, of Pittsburgh, who had his team of Waners and Traynors a few years ago playing for minor league salaries—Diz and Paul may not get the $40,000 aggregate but if Breadon doesn't come across with a neat salary then he's the meanest individual that ever scuttled a ship.

TIGERS TO LONDON

Circleville Tigers, all hilarious after scoring a touchdown even though they were beaten 24-6, travel to London to meet a mighty good team Friday—London plays hard driving football and the Tigers had better be on their toes or else.

RED ELEVEN SOLD

Sale of the Cincinnati Reds football team evidenced no surprise in grid circles—The Reds had not been doing well and therefore had not been drawing cash customers through the turnstiles either in their own or other parks—A St. Louis syndicate, purchaser of the Reds, now possesses a good club and will use what players it desires from the Reds.

Howard White, Bishop grid star, has turned his activities elsewhere for a short time—He has been named a member of the senior class promenade committee at the university where he is president of Phi Kappa Tau fraternity * * *

Australian Conquers Pacific

Flying two hours ahead of schedule in an American-made plane, Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith and his navigator, Capt. P. G. Taylor, arrived in Oakland, Cal., after conquering the west-east passage of the Pacific from Honolulu to the United States in 14 hours and 59 minutes. Apologizing for "being so early", Kingsford-Smith is shown at top, right, upon his arrival. The plane is pictured below as it swooped suddenly from the skies at Oakland municipal airport.

Uncle Sam & Aunt Mary

By J. W. J.

IT is to be hoped that during the progress of the Anniversary Celebration of the founding and establishment of the First Methodist church of Circleville, now going on, that a few moments may be employed in memorializing two, at least, of its pioneer, resourceful and faithful members, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Dunlap, familiarly and affectionately known as "Uncle Sam and Aunt Mary."

They were among the original promoters and builders of the present splendid edifice and probably contributed more money toward its actual construction, than any several other members of the congregation combined.

In addition and during the greater part of a quarter of a century following, their substantial support of the ministry and of the church was continuous and unfailing.

It was, perhaps, as temperance workers that these two faithful Methodists of Circleville and Pickaway-co, were best and most universally known. Mr. and Mrs. Dunlap, were among the founders of the Westerville Anti-Saloon League and made an original contribution of $5,000 toward its establishment. Other contributions from time to time and as needs became apparent, were made by these earnest reformers which probably mounted to still other thousands.

JOINED IN CAMPAIGNS

The writer had the privilege of joining with the Dunlaps in several county temperance campaigns and he knows whereof he speaks. Almost always, when the campaign had been fought through on pledges of financial support that did not materialize, Uncle Sam would produce his check-book and write a check for whatever the delinquency might amount to.

Aunt Mary was one of the founders of the Pickaway County Women's Christian Temperance Union and was its efficient and militant President until feebleness of age prevented further performance of the duties of the office. Under the fervency of her direction and management, the Pickaway White Ribboner organization became one of the most active and effective of the state; and which organization, left in the hands of Mrs. Lucy B. Price, Mrs. Abbie Gusman and other county loyal workers, continues its work of education in opposition to the degrading and destructive liquor traffic.

LEADERS SAME

Such martyr leaders, in the long drawn out campaign of putting into the federal Constitution the 18th Amendment, as Howard Russell, founder, Pearley A. Baker and Wayne B. Wheeler, co-agitators and workers, came frequently to Circleville and counseled around the Dunlap fireside concerning future campaigns.

And should the Methodists now assembled in Circleville, having as their chief objective the calling to mind the memories of the past and larking back a quarter of a century and more, deem it fitting and proper to make deserving and affectionate mention of those who bore the heat and burden of the day in the establishment of Methodism and sobriety, not only in this community but in the nation at large, then the Dunlaps will not be overlooked.

"KEPT THE FAITH"

A few years, only, have elapsed since these stalwarts of local Methodism and temperance, surrendered the weapons of a carmal and consistant earthly warfare. Hand in hand they kept the faith and contended for better world conditions. And if it be true that there is prepared a Valhalla of rest and reward for those who falter not in well-doing, both in purpose and substance, then the subjects of this memoir, are in possession and enjoyment of that Elysian bliss. Such souls as those of our departed the poet must had in mind when he wrote:

'Tis a beautiful thought that no deed is lost
When done by the good and true;
Whatever its mission, whatever its cost,
Time can not its work undo;
But on and on like the censer's swing,
It moves with a wondrous power,
Till worlds unknown with its praises ring,
While wrong deeds die in an hour.

"WHY DON'T YOU CRY WITH HER, FATHER?" said Caroline

PHILIP RUTLEDGE was forced to the wall, the Rutledge fortune wiped out, the ancestral Rutledge estate put up on the auction block. But to Caroline Rutledge the catastrophe lay most of all in the revelation it gave her of her parents. Her lovely sophisticated mother, the queenly woman who moved through the high society of Europe and America with exquisite poise and assurance, was sobbing in fright. And Philip, her adored father, lord of the town, handsome, confident, seemingly a tower of strength—Philip Rutledge whined and made puny excuses and never raised a hand to restore his losses. . . . No wonder Caroline, her heart sick at the surrender of her elders, flashed at Philip "Why don't you cry with her, father. . ."

YOU'LL meet for the first time in the story of Caroline Rutledge a brand new type of modern girl who will thrill you. Caroline was brought up to have everything, to live in a world of luxury and pleasure. And now blows of fortune send her whole world crashing—force her to build a completely new life—a life for which she is wholly, utterly unprepared—a life in which everything, even love and romance, is entirely different from what she has known. Can this girl take it? See the answer in this most exciting, most timely serial romance of our day!

Monday Club Program by Blind School

The meeting of the Monday club last evening proved to be one of the most interesting and entertaining of the year.

After the business session, Mrs. John H. Dunlap Jr. presented W. G. Scarberry, superintendent of the Ohio State School for the Blind. Mr. Scarberry in a short talk said that there are 250 pupils in the school, and they are all handicapped for lack of leisure. The school is part of the public school system of the State Department of Education.

Graduates enter college from this school with no further preliminaries. From the first to the twelfth grades the literary courses are the same as in the public schools. Mr. Scarberry conceived the idea of taking some of the pupils to demonstrate to gatherings of people what is being taught in the School for the Blind and to some extend how it is being done.

He introduced Ralph Sprague, who played a piano solo and Beulah Tow, who demonstrated how to use Braille. Miss Tow read a selection from Evangeline and explained and demonstrated the use of a Braille typewriter.

Miss Ruth Williams, voice teacher, who is blind sang "Homing" and "The Swallows."

Donald Moore gave a demonstration of how mathematics is learned.

Reginald Clifton and Donald Compton played a saxaphone duet, "The Old Refrain." They were accompanied by Miss Eleanor Schmidt, head of the Department of Music at the school.

Mr. McCauley, head of the Industrial Department, outlined the courses offered along this line.

Hugh Wendell sang a group of baritone solos, "On the Road to Mandalay" and "Tom's Wooing."

Mary Ella Bush, a little girl about ten years of age, gave a demonstration of how geography is learned. Mary Ella's familiarity with a map of Europe and her ability to trace her way on the map from the Adriatic sea to the Black sea would put to shame a good many children as well as grown-ups with two perfectly good eyes.

A vocal duet "The Night Hymn at Sea" by Miss Williams and Mr. Wendell closed the program.

Mr. Scarberry extended an invitation to every one in the community to visit the school at any time.

Combined Choirs Please Large Church Gathering

WASHINGTON, C. H., Nov. 6.—Another triumph was scored by the combined choirs of the First Presbyterian Church, Grace M. E. Church, Church of Christ and First Baptist Church, Sunday night in the third annual concert of sacred songs, given at Grace church under the skillful direction of Ralph Lloyd, the choirs appearing under auspices of the Cecilian Music Club to whom the community is indebted for organizing the big chorus which has proven so popular and brought enjoyment to so many in this and adjoining cities during the past three years.

The concert was in the nature of a union meeting of the four churches, with the public invited, and in addition to the several hundred people from this city, a great many came from the county at large, and from Greenfield, Wilmington, Sabina, New Holland, Chillicothe, Circleville and other points.

REHEARSE WEEKS

For several weeks the choirs had been rehearsing for the concert, first under the directors of the respective choirs, and later under direction of Mr. Lloyd, so that their careful training was apparent throughout the concert, and the choir director, the individual members of the big choir and the supporting musicians acquitted themselves with first honors, their work being praiseworthy for its excellence.

It was necessary to greatly enlarge the choir loft for the three score members of the big vested choir, so that all might be comfortably seated.

For the first time in this city the stirring strains of "Pomp And Circumstance," the choir processional, added impressiveness as the choir filed in from the rear of the church and found their places on the platform, the processional being played by Miss Marian Christopher, whose work as accompanist throughout the concert was praised generally. Miss Minnie M. Light organist of Grace church played the organ prelude and Mrs. Lillie G. Davis, organist of the First Presbyterian Church, was at the organ for the offertory. Miss Mildred Steffy, of the Church of Christ, and Miss Elizabeth Godfrey, of the First Baptist Church, were at the piano.

The four ministers of the churches participated in the services, Rev. J. A. Goddard, as a member of the choir; Rev. W. H. Wilson reading the Scriptures, Rev. J. Stanley Mitchell offering prayer, and Rev. A. K. Wilson pronouncing the benediction.

DIRECTION SHOWN

The ease with which the choir members found their places, their united action in arising and taking their seats, turning their music, and in fact every phase of their work, showed careful training at the hands of Mr. Lloyd, which added effectiveness to their singing.

The harmony, shading, interpretation and in every phrase of the singing reflected their careful training and splendid individual work, all combining to bring great pleasure to the large and appreciative audience, a great many of whom showered the director and choir with praise at the conclusion of the concert, a large number declaring the concert the best of the series of three.

Adding much to the concert was the notable work of Mrs. Lois Maurer and M. E. Myers, soloists, whose singing was outstanding and very effective. Mrs. Maurer, with her beautiful, high soprano, took the solo part in "O Lord Most Holy" and "A Rose of Sharon." a breathless hush falling over the audience while she sang the latter, a favorite among the sacred songs. Mr. Myers, who possess a rich baritone voice, had the solo part in "Give Unto The Lord."

The choirs will appear at the Circleville Methodist church next Sunday at 4 o'clock to climax a celebration.

Insurance of Deposits

IN the proposal of Mr. Crowley for a change in the system of federal deposit insurance which he administers, conservative bankers as well as others whose concern is for our banking system will find reassurance. The insurance at present is limited in the amount of $5,000 for each account, but that is merely the prelude to a plan which, under existing law, would come into effect next year. It calls for the full insurance of all deposits up to $10,000, insurance up to 75 per cent of those between that figure and $50,000, and up to 50 per cent in excess of $50,000.

In his address before the bankers Mr. Crowley proposed that the present maximum of $5,000 be continued as a permanent policy and that a definite limit be placed on the extent to which sound banks may be assessed in order to pay off depositors in institutions which have failed. If this recommendation is approved by congress when it reconvenes, the insurance plan will be greatly strengthened and that phase of it which has caused conservative bankers most concern will be corrected.

Though opposed in principle to government insurance schemes, many of these bankers have accepted the present limited plan as a necessary measure, in view of the severe blow dealt to public confidence by the bank panic of February-March, 1933. What they have strongly criticized has been the unlimited liability which would be imposed on conservatively managed institutions by the more ambitious plan due to take effect next year.

That the administration is now prepared to scrap this plan in favor of the existing system offers further evidence of its willingness to consider the bankers' point of view. The change can be made without detriment to the interest of the small depositor. For, as Mr. Crowley pointed out, a guarantee up to $5,000 fully protects 97 out of every 100 insured depositors.

CAROLINE // by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

CHAPTER I

WHEN Caroline was growing up her lovely mother used to say to her with an air of delicate reproof: "You sprawl so, dear."

"But Mummy, it's a sprawly house," Caroline had once answered. A few years later she knew that she had meant it was a gracious house.

Colonial and old. Built by the founder of the family fortune, of the town's chief industry, and the co-educational university. Other charming suburban residences had been erected on the broad acres that composed the original Rutledge homestead, but none were so authentic, so hospitable or so popular.

In the early days of the town's history the house had been the gathering place of the serious-minded, the leaders in church and politics, the elite of the artistic.

Today the college crowd—Caroline's friends—owned it. Her father, Philip Rutledge, paid the taxes and the bills, but it was open house to flocks of light-hearted revelers who, according to the servants, were in and out at all hours of the day and night.

Caroline loved it, the house, the gayety, her leadership. It seemed all hers. An only child, she had never brought to her glamorous mother a definite sense of maternal responsibility. Mrs. Rutledge had for years spent most of her time abroad. Mr. Rutledge and Caroline preferred to stay at home. Mr. Rutledge practically lived at his clubs.

The depression washed up like a tidal wave and destroyed the security of many homes in the neighborhood. Hawthorn House stood like a bulwark, but Caroline's followers diminished somewhat in numbers as the semesters ended and the calls to come home came in to some of the students from distant parts. A few among the local residents were lost to her, but those who remained in her "set" felt safe, realized little of what was going on in the world.

No great sums were needed by them for their good times; apparently their parents were carrying on as usual and at Hawthorn House everything was as it always had been. Good cheer in plenty.

The entertaining in other homes gradually fell off; the hospitality at Hawthorn House increased. Mr. Rutledge never faced the issue of mounting expenses, telling himself that things cost less now and letting it go at that—just as he avoided facing issues at his factory by spending his time in his clubs.

In April Mrs. Rutledge returned from abroad. The boat trip had been a bore, people talked incessantly of the bad times. Alva Rutledge suspected that most of them were coming back because of lack of funds to continue away from home. For the first time in her inconsequential life she thought of money, glad that the family fortune was well rooted in an established industry. People would always want soap and cosmetics, she assured herself.

Mr. Rutledge did not meet her in New York. Undoubtedly he was too busy at the factory, she thought.

It was good to be at home. She enjoyed having Caroline's gay friends in the house after that dreary boat. Caroline was delighted with her mother. Surely no other mother had ever been so alluringly beautiful.

"You're about the only old lady my friends would stand for, darling," she told Alva soberly.

Alva Rutledge shuddered, protested the description.

"But that's just what I mean," Caroline exclaimed. "You make us forget that you're not of our generation. You'll never age. You're divine, Mother, especially in that yellow negligee."

"Silly. Will you take these popovers down and tell Anna I want Melba toast? I wonder why she forgot. Is she getting careless?"

Caroline took up the covered dish. "Even Anna thinks you could never be anything but ravishing no matter what you ate," she said. "But don't run any risks today. I want you to look your loveliest this afternoon. There'll be hundreds of people."

"Good gracious. How do you feed them?"

"Well, then, dozens. And it's a cocktail party. Nothing to eat but canapes. You brought some new recipes for Anna, didn't you?"

"Nothing new. Tell her to wrap stuffed olives with bacon and grill them."

Caroline said: "They're crazy about them," and started to leave the room. Her mother called to her. "What are you wearing?" she asked.

"Black."

Alva shook her head. "Because you have auburn hair like mine?"

Caroline looked at her mother's waves of burnished gold. "Have I really hair like that?" she asked.

"Exactly. And it's not the shade for black with a skin as fair as yours. Haven't you anything in a soft gray?"

"I can get it. Jeanne is showing gray. I wanted to ask you first."

Her mother smiled. "Only because I've just come from Paris, no?"

"You know you wanted me to think for myself," Caroline reminded her.

"Yes," Alva admitted with a faint little sigh. "To avoid friction. You are much like your Grandfather Rutledge. Your father and I are different. It would not be easy to think for you."

"You and Father are adorable. Grandfather Rutledge was stubborn."

"Don't criticize him child. He'd be proud of you. You have the Rutledge eyes."

A smoldering expression appeared in the girl's clear amber-brown orbs. She was remembering resentfully that her paternal grandfather had never been fond of her fascinating mother.

Alva understood. She smiled tolerantly. "I suppose I am the orchid he used to call me," she said. "And I never knew until he told me, that an orchid is a parasite. Your father was annoyed with him and made it up to me with a present so naturally I used to torment him into calling me an orchid as frequently as I could."

"If I were as beautiful as you I shouldn't care what anyone called me," Caroline insisted.

"Run along for my toast," her mother urged, and wondered if all the mirrors in the house were false, for truly Caroline was more beautiful than she. The Rutledge eyes—that amazingly clear brown.

She reached out and picked up a hand-mirror from a stand by her bed. No, her eyes were not so good a brown, but . . . She shrugged. Of course, the Rutledge blood would dominate in her child the charm that was hers. This charm had come to her from her own father, a Southern gentleman as irrepressibly a devotee to love of life as Grandfather Rutledge had been a rock-ribbed realist.

She thought of her sister Fern, so like their colorless mother. Poor Fern. Well, at least Caroline was beautiful and sweet. Possibly a girl who was only touched with Rutledge realism could feel joy at least to the extent of making life worth living. It had hardly been so for Grandfather Rutledge. With him it was a grim-mouthed endurance test. She hoped Caroline would never get to be like that, and turned her thoughts to consideration of a dance she must give for Caroline soon—a dance with talent from New York—something to remind the town that she was again in resi dence at Hawthorn House. And incidentally, to announce the girl's engagement.

No shadow of depression here. Music, laughter, soft lights.

Caroline's party that afternoon was handled entirely by Caroline. Her mother took no part in it until she came down to join the guests, refreshed, sparklingly animated and simply shimmering in beauty and cool green silk.

Everything was lovely. "The child really is capable," Alva thought, and wished she felt happier about it.

It was a cool spring day. Backlogs held the fires in the fireplaces. Daffodils were all about. Carpets were rolled up and out of the way. The big chairs wore new English chintz—she had sent it over herself, a color to match the gowns she wore. A pretty maid who looked as though she would like to share in the dancing passed plates of hot olives and salted almonds, but the guests themselves served the cocktails.

No shadow of depression here. Music, laughter, soft lights. The tinkle of ice, couples lost in rhythmic abandon, young men bringing in tall silver shakers with which they described fanciful arcs in the air with an energy that seemed tireless.

Later there was a bit of clowning, an extemporized adagio dance, an imitation of Beatrice Lille, laughter a little louder, and one girl that sulked because she said Caroline had no right to be engaged to Howard Dunsworth. Everyone condoled with her in an amusing fashion, but Alva wondered. How ard was not finding it funny. He didn't like it. His uneasiness brought Alva at last to studying the girl. She saw, or thought she saw, a real feeling behind the confessed pique.

PATTERN 9188

Here is a house frock, every line of which has been thought out carefully to make a slenderizing design for the more matronly figure. Notice how the flattering surplice closing is emphasized by chic buttons and how the point below the waist gives that nice slim look to the hips. And don't you like the gracefully short sleeves? They are cut full enough to permit freedom of action when you are zipping about your housewifely duties. The skirt boasts a perky kick pleat for the same purpose. Choose a dainty cotton fabric for this design—a dark blue or dark green with white pin dots would be a slimming color choice.

Pattern 9188 may be ordered only in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards 36 inch fabric.

SELF-ARRESTING DRUNK

BRIDGEWATER, Mass. — Joseph Jozack told police over the telephone they had better arrest him, because he was drunk. Five hours later he called up again to find out why no policeman had come to arrest him. Chief James R. Moore informed him if he wanted to be arrested, he should come to the police station. So two hours later, Jozack arrived at the station, and was locked up.

Suffered From Hives For Seventeen Years

Authority Tells of an Unusual Case in Discussing Causes and Cure of This Ailment

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

URTICARIA or hives, as it is more commonly called, is often one of the most difficult problems the physician faces. In a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical association there was reported a case of hives of seventeen years' duration which had resisted every effort at cure. The underlying cause was finally discovered and the sufferer relieved of his annoying affliction.

Dr. Copeland

Of course, this was an unusual case. As a rule, most cases are simple and clear up within a short time. Yet many times the trouble is stubborn and difficult to cure. Hives cause a great deal of embarrassment and suffering.

This ailment is due to a peculiar sensitivity to some substance or substances. These offending substances may be in the food or clothing, associated with the home surroundings or materials used in work. The sufferer soon solves his peculiar weakness and avoids contact with the offending material. But, as I have implied, it is often difficult to determine what causes the sensitivity. Until this is known, little hope for cure or relief can be offered the victim.

The trouble takes the form of firm, whitish patches on the skin. They appear suddenly and only after contact with the irritating substance. These swellings or wheals may become as large as a fifty-cent piece. They itch and burn and sting. Sometimes they are mistaken for mosquito bites, which they closely resemble.

Methods of Treatment

Temporary relief can be obtained by the application of calamine lotion or the use of a solution of hyposulphite of soda. When the eruption covers the entire body soothing results are obtained by bathing in a tub to which large quantities of baking soda have been added.

Permanent relief can be obtained by finding the cause and eradicating it from the life of the patient. Hives is often encountered in occupations where the worker is exposed to certain chemicals, wood or materials. Cure is possible only by change of occupation.

Often the sensitivity is due to a food poisoning such as the protein from some other outside source. Just as in the case of asthma, the offending protein can be determined by special skin tests. After the substance has been discovered it is often possible to correct the sensitivity by the use of special vaccines.

Hives may be the result of faulty hygienic habits. Victims of this disturbance should avoid any tendency to constipation. They should drink at least six to eight glasses of water every day. An abundance of fresh air and sunlight, well balanced meals and adequate hours of rest and relaxation, are other factors that must not be overlooked.

Answers to Health Queries

Mrs. A. Q.—Is there any cure for swollen veins except having injections?

A.—If the varicose veins are slight, bandaging or wearing an elastic stocking is often effective. For full particulars restate your question and send a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Mrs. H. E. Q.—What would you advise for a child who fusses and cries without much cause. He seems to be nervous and when he sleeps he moves his hands and fingers?

A.—It is possible that the child has intestinal worms. For full particulars restate your question and send a stamped self-addressed envelope.

S. S. Q.—I have large tonsils. Will this hinder or prevent my growth in any way?

A.—If tonsils are enlarged and diseased, they are injurious to the health and should be removed.

A Reader. Q.—What would cause a continual weak, sick feeling in the stomach?

A.—This may be due to "biliousness". First correct the diet, avoiding an excess of sweets, starches, coffee and tea. Your trouble may also be due to some underlying disturbance. I would suggest that you consult your family doctor.

be diverted from private industry and trade.

The inevitable result of this, of course, would be to create more unemployment, who in turn would join EPIC resulting in still further loss to industry, and so on and on until the whole industrial structure would go bankrupt.

Ohio's plan avoids this destructive circle.

It does not insulate the unemployed in a separate economy. Under the Buckeye formula money spent for relief is not affected by what the unemployed produce.

The dozen idle factories leased by the State, and manned by unemployed, produce certain goods and edibles which are used to supplement the relief extended to the workless. Cash relief remains the same.

Furthermore, the State is under specific pledge that if a factory can be returned to profitable private manufacture, it is given back. Also, if a leased factory worker declines a job from a private employer, he is discharged from the state-operated plant.

MOVIES

AT THE GRAND

The last scene filmed on Joe E. Brown's new First National comedy, "The Circus Clown," now showing at the Grand Theatre, is the first to be seen when the picture is flashed on the screen.

It is generally known that motion pictures are not filmed in the continuity of the story, but this marks the first actual case when the final scene photographed is the first scene in the film.

The reason for this peculiar arrangement is quite simple. One of the earlies' sequences in the picture reveals Joe as a circus performer of yesteryear, with the short-cropped haircut in favor at that time.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Perhaps it is sheer genius, or perhaps it is that unusual compatibility that exists between actress Elizabeth Bergner and director-husband Paul Czinner that makes their work together so unfailingly successful.

Miss Bergner makes her debut before American screen audiences in "Catherine the Great," the London Films production in which she is co-starred with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

Critics both here and abroad have acclaimed her work in this United Artists release, which comes to the Cliftona Theatre Wednesday and Thursday, as comprising one of the finest characterizations ever seen on the screen, and, without in any way detracting from her genius as an actress, are quite definite in their praise of Czinner's subtle and understanding direction.

DOKE TELLS STORY, CONFIDENT IN CELL

WOODLAND, Cal., Nov. 6.—Confident of an acquittal, Judson C. Doke, 34, rested in his county jail cell here today from the ordeal of testifying in his own behalf to a charge of murdering Lamar Hollingshead, 23, college student and poet who was carrying on a torrid love affair with Doke's pretty young "white hibiscus" wife, Helen Louise Doke.

"I concealed nothing," said the square-jawed handsome defendant, "and I'm sure the jury will send me back into the world so I may take up my life where it was cut short by this tragedy. I didn't mean to kill Hollingshead and I am not guilty of murder under any interpretation."

Doke testified he went to a cabin in a wheatfield where Hollingshead was working, exchanged the poet's letters to Mrs Doke for the ones she had written Hollingshead and then fired the fatal shot when Hollingshead refused to write a statement that his love for Mrs. Doke was only physical.

The poet started to write, Doke said, and then jumped up and cried, "I'll be damned if I will; you can shoot me."

DEMOS. GAIN BY 2 VOTES

NEW ASHFORD, Mass., Nov. 6.—Maintaining its record for being the first town in the United States to report a complete vote in the elections, this Berkshire hills community today showed a Democratic increase by two votes.

Figures in the gubernatorial race were:
Bacon (R) 22,
Curley (D) 10,
Goodwin (Ind) 1,

This compared with the 1922 vote for governor of:
Youngman (R) 23,
Ely (D) 8,

Curley gained two votes over Ely's total of 1932, while Bacon lost 1. There were 36 votes cast this year, as against 33 in 1932.

The senatorial figures this year were:
Walsh (D) 19,
Washburn (R) 13,

This compared with the 1932 vote for the United States senator:
Butler (R) 29,
Coolidge (D) 4.

When the polls opened shortly before 6 a. m., about 20 voters who had come from their homes in outlying sections by automobile, were already gathered there. The first voter to cast a ballot was Miss Phoebe Jordan, 65, the town's oldest voter, and up to three years ago a staunch Republican and chairman of the Republican town committee.

Fog banks encircled the town as the first voters arrived and when the total electriate had cast ballots at 6:32 a. m., and the count began, it began to rain hard. The polls were kept open under state law until 9:45 a. m.

Following tabulation of the vote, State Senator Thomas J. Plunkett (R) who is seeking re-election, gave the whole town a breakfast in the schoolhouse.

total of 2,700,000 voters would go to the polls.

In Franklin-co returns were expected to come in slowly because of the vast amount of tabulating to be done. Each voter here was handed eight ballots, which if 130,000 persons vote, would entail the counting of over a million ballots.

Besides the regular party and judiciary tickets here, the ballots included an assortment of bond issues, the constitutional amendments, initiated ordinances, school levy and a county charter proposal.

In Cleveland each voter received four ballots. Since the voters there appear to be chiefly interested in who will be the new sheriff, the county was expected to break no speed records in completing the count for U. S. senator and state offices.

With the Democrats pinning their hope of electing Martin L. Davey governor on the majority they expect to receive for him in Cuyahoga-co, it may take the complete vote there to definitely decide whether Davey or Clarence J. Brown, Republican, is the winner.

RACE FOR

Third and Ninth districts, respectively. In the Eighth, Gertrude Jones, Findlay Republican, only woman in any of the races, was said to have gained much ground from Congressman Brooks Fletcher, Democrat.

While the Democratic state command optimistically predicted the election of all 24 of its congressional candidates, it would consider the day's work well done if Fess is defeated even though there are a few lower house casualties.

CREDITED SERVICE

But Donahey's stand on the President's policies caused the Democratic organization much uneasiness. Never an "organization" man, he won the nomination hands down from Gov. George White, then in control of the state organization, and from Congressman West who was persistently reported to have tacit endorsement of the national administration.

Donahey made few campaign speeches, but in each he praised the President's sincerity of purpose and credited him with rendering "well nigh unparalleled service to his country since March 4, 1933."

So far so good, thought the party leaders, but Donahey invariably wound up his addresses by promising to "support the President, in every proper way." Those last four words never failed to irritate 100 per cent "New Dealers" who are without an expression from him on many vital phases of the recovery program.

Neither Fess nor Donahey personally abused the other, but the hectic gubernatorial contest found every known political weapon employed, including race and religious prejudice. Even the Ku Klux Klan, once a powerful factor in Ohio politics, again reared its head.

Neither Brown nor Davey offered a solution for the state's critical financial problem, leaving that to be worked out by the legislature. In order to provide operating revenue for schools and local governments until a new tax program can be worked out and put into effect, Davey proposed a 2-year moratorium on principal payments of subdivision bonds.

Branded "repudiation" by many financial authorities but stoutly defended by Davey who shouted that "no one has offered anything better," the moratorium was seized upon by Brown as a major campaign issue. He said it would ruin Ohio's credit, but pointed out that whatever benefits might be derived from it would have to await acceptance of the moratorium by the legislature.

ON SCHOOL ISSUE

The most forceful policy declaration by Brown was his "unalterable opposition" to granting state aid to parochial or private schools. Unwilling to state publicly whether he was for or against parochial school aid, Davey was accused by Brown of "trying to carry water on both shoulders." He in turn cried that the Republican candidate was stirring up religious prejudices.

A highlight of the gubernatorial campaign was the attack on Davey for alleged financial transactions of himself and companies. It was delivered and repeated by Paul M. Herbert, G. O. P. candidate for lieutenant governor, who charged that Davey "circumvented the law." This brought forth from Davey a defense of his bank dealings, the statement that all loans in anyway connected with his name were "amply secured by collateral," and finally a promise to sue Herbert and the Republican campaign committee for libel after the election.

Herbert's Democratic opponent in today's election is State Sen. Harold G. Mosier, Cleveland, author of the Ohio liquor control act and son-in-law of State Supreme Court Justice Thomas A. Jones, a Republican.

Contests for attorney general, secretary of state and state treasurer found the same opponents who fought them out two years ago competing again. George S. Myers, Cleveland Democrat, sought re-election as secretary of state, opposed by Tax Commissioner George C. Braden, Warren Republican. Attorney General John W. Bricker, Columbus Republican, asked to be re-elected over Herbert S. Duffey, Columbus Democrat. Harry S. Day, Fremont Republican, sought re-election as state treasurer over Joseph T. Ferguson, Barberton Democrat.

VOTE ON JUSTICES

An unprecedented number of supreme court justices will be elected, two for full 6-year terms, one for a term expiring Dec. 31, 1936, and two for short terms expiring Dec. 31, 1934.

Full term contests found Charles B. Zimmerman incumbent, and N. Craig McBride, Hillsboro, Democrats, pitted against Frank W. Geiger, state utilities commissioner, Springfield, and Arthur H. Day, Cleveland, Republicans.

Judge Howard L. Bevis, Cincinnati Democrat, hoped to be continued as the successor to Judge R. R. Kinkade, who resigned a year ago. His Republican opponent was Roy H. Williams, Sandusky.

Republican candidates for the two short terms were W. F. Carver, Millersburg, and R. M. Winegardner, of McConnelsville. They were opposed by William L. Hart, Alliance, and Willis H. Liggett, Columbus, Republicans.

The short term vacancies occurred as a result of the death of Judge Robert H. Day, Massillon, and the resignation of Judge Florence Allen, now a federal jurist. Appointive incumbents are Judge Zimmerman and Judge Robert N. Wilkin, Dover Democrat, defeated by McBride in the primary.

Velocity of a River

Swift streams are not as easily turned aside from their course as slow ones and hence the former maintain straighter courses. The velocity of a river depends on the difference in altitude between the source and the mouth, also on the distance which separates them, as this determines the grade. The volume of water is also an important factor.

ings "cold blooded murder" while Attorney General William A. Schnader, Republican candidate for governor, promised a full investigation.

The dead were:

Frank Fiolla, 65, Kelayres, shot dead in the street, and John Golosky, 28, of McAdoo, and William Forte, 35, of McAdoo Heights, who died in the Hazelton hospital of their wounds:

Also in the hospital and expected to die were:

Andry Kotishion, 36, of Lofty, and Dominick Perna, 35, of Kelayres.

Ten other persons, five of them women, were in the Hazelton hospital with less serious wounds.

CALL STATE POLICE

Threats to burn and dynamite the Bruno homes were shouted by the crowd of marchers as the dead, dying and wounded were borne away from the wild scene here last night but state police, hurriedly summoned from Harrisburg, held the crowd in check.

Feeling was intense today in this little community of 600 inhabitants as state police held the Bruno families for questioning.

The parade wound its way through the borough last night as the climax to a Democratic rally by which the leaders hoped to tear the mining community from the Bruno Republican factions who have held control for several years.

As the marchers approached a church, a deadly leaden stream of bullets poured from the second floor of one house and the third floor of the dwelling on the opposite side of the street. The victims were caught in the crossfire.

British Attitude Toward Japanese Tonnage Puzzles State Department

WASHINGTON-Behind the naval negotiations now under way in London is a lot more than a mere matter of Japanese tonnage. No matter what tonnage or ration the Japanese get, they will still pursue their militant policy in the Far East.

But what is more important—though not admitted by the State Department—is the question of British and American co-operation.

The United States and Great Britain together can block Japanese aggression. Singly they can't.

So far the co-operation between the two countries has been nil.

The alleged "alliance" so acclaimed at the time Herbert Hoover and Ramsey MacDonald sat on their log on the Rapidan, has disappeared in smoke. It evaporated not long after the British Labor Government was replaced by the present Tory regime.

During the Japanese invasion of Manchuria, Britain and the United States worked at complete cross-purposes. When Henry L. Stimson sent a note of protest to the Japanese Foreign Office, the British Ambassador went through the same notion.

But afterward he would call to say that his protest meant nothing.

During those days the old Anglo-Japanese alliance was as effective as if it never had been abrogated.

British Awakening

Since then, there has been a certain shift of British sentiment. Lancaster textile interests have wakened up to see their markets invaded by Japanese goods. In India, a bitter trade war has been waged over Japanese exports.

In Siam, Japanese are stirring up dissension against British domination over King Prajadhipok. That is one reason he is on the way out. The Japanese want control in order to build a canal through the Isthmus of Krim, thereby nullifying Britain's great Far Eastern stronghold—the Singapore Base.

The British also have received intimations that the Japanese have their eyes on Hongkong, and that wealthy British sphere of influence, the Yangtze Valley. To thwart this, Field Marshall Allenby and British Admirals held an important conference on a warship off Singapore.

But despite this British fear, there has been a definite indication that the British would work with the United States rather than with Japan.

State Department officials have searched for it, would welcome such a sign. But there is nothing concrete. Britain's game seems to be that of playing Japan off against the United States.

In London, the conferences are three-cornered—the Japanese with the British, the British with the United States, and the United States with the Japanese. No one knows exactly what one side says to the other.

In such an atmosphere nothing beyond publication of pious platitudes can be expected.

Two Plans

Upton Sinclair's EPIC plan, to "end poverty in California," has been widely publicized. But it is not the only program of its kind in the United States.

Ohio also has a plan, which while little known beyond its boundaries, has the virtue of having been in successful operation for over a year.

While aimed at the same general objective—creating employment for the workless—the two plans differ drastically in fundamental economics.

EPIC, as conceived by Sinclair, would create a separate economy of the unemployed within the national economy.

That is, they would be supplied with factories, land, and other productive means, to feed, clothe, and house themselves. The hundreds of millions of dollars now being spent for this purpose would

POLICE JAIL SUSPECT IN STOLL CASE

Resembles Robinson, Jr., Pennsylvania Officers Say; Says He is Hitch-Hiker Enroute from Chicago; Questioning Continues

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 6.—A man resembling Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., sought as the kidnaper of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll of Louisville, Ky., was arrested here today after police broadcast an alarm for officers to be on the lookout for the hunted fugitive.

The arrested man, whose name was not learned immediately, said he was a hitch-hiker enroute from Chicago to Connellsville, Pa.

Brought to police headquarters, he was questioned and fingerprinted.

The man was picked up a few minutes after state police broadcast an order calling for the apprehension of the suspect.

QUESTIONED IN JAIL

Special details of the state police at Washington were enroute here to question the man. He was being grilled meanwhile by local authorities.

According to state police at Washington, Pa., the man got off a bus there and was hitch-hiking his way out of town when given a "lift" by Cecil O. Northrop who was enroute to Uniontown for a doctor's examination.

S. G. Krepp, judge of elections here, told International News Service that state police and local authorities were checking with Chicago officials on the man's hitch-hiking story.

JUSTICES OF PEACE ELECT J. HOOVER

A Pickaway-co unit of the Southern Ohio Justice of Peace association was formed at a meeting in the court room Monday evening with John S. Hoover, of Harrison-twp, named president. Other officers are Isaac Rossiter, Saltcreek-twp, vice president, and Z. L. Smith, Darbyville, secretary and treasurer.

The next meeting of the organization will be Nov. 13.

The organization is for justices of the peace, village mayors, constables and marshals. Its objectives include to obtain better qualified justices of the peace, to eliminate kangaroo courts, and to become better acquainted with the law.

ABDUCTION CHARGE REDUCED TO MINOR WEAPON COMPLAINT

A kidnaping charge had been reduced to carrying concealed weapons today with Albert Jones, an ex-convict arrested in Clarksburg, W. Va., last week to face the charge.

Jones was caught after taking Elva Collins, 16, to Clarksburgh. The girl's father charged abduction but when authorities learned the girl went willingly they had the abduction charge withdrawn. Jones carried a revolver when he went to the Collins home to take the girl with him, Sheriff Charles Radcliff reports, so that charge is the one officials believe will "stick."

Jones is now in the county jail.

Mace Has Troubles!

Grover Mace, of Tarlton, was in the county jail Tuesday for a couple of reasons. In the first place he has been unable to provide bond for an assault and battery charge pending against him before the next grand jury.

After being held in jail a while a charge of attempting to smuggle mail from the jail was filed against him. While awaiting release on bond in the assault case he was fined $50 and costs and sentenced to 30 days on the smuggling count.

Three Slain As Bullets End Parade

Leaders of Pennsylvania Republican Faction Jailed; Others May Die.

HAZELTON, Pa., Nov. 6.—Bloodshed that took a toll of three lives and was expected to claim two more victims ushered in the voting today in Pennsylvania's hectic election campaign.

The victims were shot down by a cross-fire of machine gun bullets and pistol fire as they marched through the main street of the small mining village of Kelayres near here last night.

State police held Joseph J. Bruno, a Republican political leader, and his nephew, Paul, and members of their families in connection with the killings.

Witnesses said it was from the two Bruno homes on opposite sides of the street that the deadly stream of fire poured down on the marchers as they paraded through the town, burning red flares and shouting cheers.

FORMER CHOIR SINGS AT CHURCH SERVICE

Dr. Lilly Directs Organization as Anthem Sung in 1915 is Repeated; Programs Continue

The Methodist church program Monday evening was devoted to reminiscences and music by the church's former choir under the direction of Dr. R. F. Lilley. Miss Anna Schleyer and Mrs. K. J. Herrmann played the organ.

The program was another in commemoration of the 150th anniversary of Methodism and the 25th anniversary of the present church structure. This evening will be known as "Young People' Night" with the subdistrict meeting of Epworth leagues scheduled. The county orchestra directed by Miss Betty Scothorn will play.

More than 30 persons reported to Dr. Lilly for choir duty with the anthem selected being "King of Glory" from a cantata done by the choir April 4, 1915.

The evening's speakers were Rev. L. C. McCandlish, Adelphi, whose subject was "The Church's Opportunity"; Rev. H. O. Harbaugh, who reminisced, and Mrs. Carl Ritz, who read the history of the church's music. Dr. W. C. L. Correll also had a part in the program.

Details Concerning Disappearance, Discovery Withheld; Hunting Job, She Said.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Fourteen year-old Jane Merrell, object of a city-wide search since her disappearance in ragamuffin costume on Hallowe'en, was back at her home today after being found, according to reports, on 75th street between Second and Third avenues.

A mysterious ban on details of her return was clamped down by police who declined to vouchsafe any information concerning her whereabouts during the five day search. It was stated only that she had been found by Detective Edward Collins.

After questioning by police, Jane was taken to the home of her foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Merrell, in Forest Hills.

Police said the girl was found in a Manhattan rooming house.

Athough Jane had no more money her room rent was paid one week in advance.

Jane told detectives she had been seeking a job, but had been unable to secure one.

Race For Governor Holds Interest of Buckeye Voters

COLUMBUS, Nov. 6.—Pivotal Ohio which two years ago returned a 74,000 majority for Franklin D. Roosevelt, went to the polls today to record a verdict on his "New Deal."

Concensus of political observers was that it would be in the President's favor, though probably not without some reservations.

Defeat of Republican Sen. Simeon D. Fess, who finds little to commend and much to abhor in the "New Deal," was predicted on all sides, with the betting here about 3 to 1 on ex-Gov. A. V. "Honest Vic" Donahey, Democrat.

Fess' defeat would be hailed by the Democrats as a great victory for the "New Deal," but Republicans prepared to attribute it largely to Donahey's tremendous personal popularity. They recalled that the only "100 per cent New Dealer" in the Democratic primary, Congressman Charles West, was badly trounced by the same Donahey.

WHAT OF GOVERNOR?

While they are passing judgment on Fess and Donahey, Ohio's two and a half million voters will elect either Clarence J. Brown, Republican, or Martin L. Davey, as governor for the next two years. They fought tooth and nail in a contest marred by frequent injection of personalities.

Both are veterans in the Buckeye political arena, Brown a former lieutenant governor and secretary of state, and Davey a former Democratic congressman from the normally Republican Fourteenth district. Brown was reported to be the favorite, but by a very slender margin which with an unusual show of strength Davey might easily upset.

The Democrats' anticipated success in the U. S. senatorial contest was expected to be tinctured by the loss of a few of their 18 congressional seats. Republicans, left with but six after the 1932 landslide, hoped to add at least four more today.

Their best bet appeared to be in the Eighteenth district where ex-Congressman Frank Murphy, Republican, is attempting a comeback at the expense of the Democratic encumbent, Lawrence Imhoff.

They also went out after the congressional scalp of Byron B. Harlan and Warren J. Duffey, Democratic incumbent in the

30 MILLIONS BALLOT TODAY

Survey of States Shows Activity on Various Fronts; Democrats Confident.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.— Some thirty million American voters went to the polls today in an election that will determine the character of the New Deal during the next two years—and to a certain extent re-make the political map of the country during that same period.

Election day found the Democrats exuding confidence; the Republicans merely hopeful.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Nov. 6.—President Roosevelt became, to all legal purposes, just plain Franklin D. Roosevelt of the village of Hyde Park today, as he prepared to go to the polls like millions of other Americans and vote.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 6. — The life of Lawrence G. Puchta, had been claimed on the very eve of election today by a pneumonia attack.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 6.—Upwards of 3,000,000 voters went to the polls today to settle California's most remarkable gubernatorial battle.

Interest of the nation and world centered on the verdict to be rendered by the California voters on the candidacy of Upton Sinclair, epic-Democrat, and his plan to "End Poverty in California."

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Fair weather promised an outpouring of 3,000,000 or more voters in Illinois today as the polls opened with Democratic leaders confidently predicting victory in the off-year election.

Interest throughout the state centered in the battles over congressional seats, which were the objects of furious campaigns that were waged until the eleventh hour. The governorship is not at stake.

WORLEY WOULD REDUCE CHARGES

COLUMBUS, Nov. 6.—An extraordinary session of city council today was set for Friday as Mayor Henry W. Worley launched a fight for reduction of rates charged by the municipal light plant so that it could compete with a privately owned utility.

Lowering of the charges by the municipal plant also may open the door to a $1,300,000 PWA loan to enlarge the plant, the mayor said. In a special message to council, he warned that the privately owned utility would "have the city at its mercy" if rates of the municipal plant are not reduced.

Meanwhile, Columbus voters today were balloting on a schedule of compromise rates offered by the private concern. If the compromise rate reductions are approved, and rates of the city plant remain the same, Mayor Worley said, the municipality operated concern will face loss of business.

HAUPTMANN'S LAWYER BUSY

Reilly Cheered After Conference; Starts From 'Scratch,' He Reports.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Edward J. Reilly, new defense counsel for Bruno Richard Hauptmann, was busy today building up a case for the man accused of killing the baby of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Reilly said, he was "starting from scratch," and borrowing no ideas from James M. Fawcett, his predecessor. Reilly intends to seek from Fawcett only the papers relating to the case.

The defense attorney was cheered today as a result of a conference with Hauptmann in the jail at Flemington, N. J., yesterday. On that visit, he was accompanied by C. Lloyd Fisher, Flemington representative for the defense.

Reilly said he found the accused man "cool, calm and collected."

ALL-NIGHT JOB EXPECTED FOR VOTING JUDGES

One O'clock Check-up Shows More Persons Voting Than in Primary

FAR AHEAD OF 1932

Late Returns Expected in Parts of Ohio

The election board was to face an all-night task Tuesday, with election returns expected to start coming in about 9 o'clock. There are 38 precincts to report and all must be in before members of the board leave for their homes.

The county election board is headed by Mrs. G. G. Leist and its other members are T. J. Burgett, J. R. Hott and Russell Imler. Boyd Trout, clerk, is ill and his place is being taken by Lawrence J. Johnson, whose tabulations have always helped the board speed its results. Harry E. Weiss, deputy clerk, will also be on the job.

RETURNS AVAILABLE

Election returns will be available late this evening at The Herald office where results will be tabulated as soon as they are received from the various precincts through the county.

It is urged that all telephone calls be confined to Phone No. 782.

The board's office is in the city building but it is impossible for individuals to receive returns there. Results will be available at the court house and at The Herald office.

More voters had visited the polls in Circleville at 1 p. m. Tuesday than either the primary in August or the presidential election in November, 1932. A check-up by The Herald disclosed 1,314 persons had cast ballots at 1 o'clock this year while in August only 1,165 had marched to the city's nine voting booths. In the presidential year, 1932, the number at the same time of day was 893.

Perfect weather and numerous contests were drawing the populace.

Although several of the various precinct officials believed their noon figures were behind the primary only one had fallen behind while another was tied with the primary mark.

The comparative figures follow:

	Today	Aug. 14	1932
1st North	162	121	93
1st East	216	172	141
1st West	120	113	95
2nd West	176	165	125
2nd East	140	140	104
3rd North	136	146	110
3rd South	108	88	51
4th North	140	130	90
4th South	116	90	84
Totals	1,314	1,165	893

No disorders of any kind had been reported to the election board office this afternoon. In several of the precincts, notably third north and second east, groups were standing in the streets for no apparent reason although every thing was going along smoothly on the election front.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 6—If the vote in today's election is close, as it was expected to be in the gubernatorial race, the winner may not be determined until far after midnight.

This was the belief of George Neffner, secretary of state's statistician, who anticipated a

HEAVY VOTE IN RURAL SECTIONS

According to W. H. Alexander, government forecaster here, the weather was generally fair with a warm sun slowly forcing the thermometer upwards. The high temperature of the day will be about 50 degrees, he said. The low point was 30.

Election experts said good weather meant a large turnout in rural districts.

Huey Long's Libel Suit To Be Tried in 3 Weeks

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—The $500,000 libel suit of Gen. Samuel T. Ansell against Senator Huey P. Long (D) of Louisiana may be called up for trial in the District of Columbia supreme court within three weeks.

The U. S. Supreme court denied Long's claim of immunity because of his senatorial position. The feud between the two developed when Ansell was counsel for a senate committee, which investigated Louisiana election methods.

The District of Columbia court of appeals ruled circulation of speeches made by Long on the senate floor were subject to libel suit. Before the high court, Long's attorneys urged modification of the opinion. They contended they would go to trial with their case prejudiced. However, the high court made no reference to the modification plea.

Members of congress, the high court said, are exempt from "arrest" while attending congress. The word "arrest," however, the court held, cannot be construed to apply to service of summons in a libel suit.

"STOP BERWANGER" IS CRY TO OHIOANS

COLUMBUS, Nov. 6.—Pointing always toward Jay Berwanger, storm center of Chicago university's gridders, Coach Francis Schmidt today planned another defensive session for his Ohio State varsity against a freshman squad equipped with Maroon plays.

Yesterday the varsity and reserves battled through rain and mud in their practice session, with Schmidt laying the groundwork for his defensive tactics against the triple-threat star from Chicago.

The practice this week will be Schmidt's second week of planning for the Chicago game. All last week, although ostensibly scrimmaging for the Western Reserve clash at Cleveland, the Buckeye gridders were being drilled in plays for next Saturday.

PLAY 3 IN ROW

The invasion of Chicago marks the first of a series of three Big Ten conference games which will wind up Ohio State's schedule. Michigan and Iowa follow Chicago in succession, but the Maroons are expected to provide the greatest opposition.

Bud Cox, Sam Busich, and Frank Cumiskey all loom as terminal possibilities following the consignment of Trevor Rees, star end, to the hospital with a wrenched back and kidney ailment. Jack Smith, halfback with an injured knee, may not play Saturday, Trainer Tucker P. Smith said. Dick Heekin, driving halfback, was excused early from practice yesterday with an injured leg.

A victory for Ohio State in the Chicago game this year, the first clash of the two schools since 1927, would give the Buckeyes a total of five victories, two defeats and two ties in the nine games that the schools have played.

Grayson Scores for Stanford

Bobby Grayson, flashing halfback of the Stanford university eleven, is pictured dashing across the goal line for a touchdown in the annual game between Stanford and the University of California at Los Angeles. This goal helped Stanford to defeat their opponents by a score of 27 to 0 as 50,000 spectators watched.

TURLEY SECOND AMONG SCORERS

COLUMBUS, Nov. 6.—With 75 points to his individual credit, John Turley, the Ohio Wesleyan quarterback and triple-threat artist, today had increased his lead in Ohio collegiate scoring circles to 27 points and was in second place in the national roster.

The touchdown, extra point, and field goal which Turley scored in the game against Miami University last Saturday put him only four points behind Strutt, of Duquesne University, who is in the lead for national scoring honors with 79 points.

Figured on the average basis, however, Turley has scored 12½ points a game for six games, while Strutt, who has played in seven contests this season, has averaged only slightly more than 11 points a game.

Foster of Denison retained his second place position in the Ohio ranks by scoring a touchdown against Otterbein Saturday and making his score 48. Jenkins, also of Denison, crashed his way from ninth down to third place, by virtue of two touchdowns, to go into a tie with Goldsmith, of Baldwin-Wallace, at 42.

Bowling News

The Klever five, Washington C. H. women's ten pin team, made the Circleville Five step to win a 2264-2075 victory Monday evening on the Circleville Recreation alleys.

Circleville Five: Pearce, 386; M. Baker, 476; Campbell, 462; Wolf, 475; Delong, 471.

LORD JIM IS SOUGHT IN EUROPE, REPORT

COLUMBUS, Nov. 6.—European horsemen are eager to buy Lard Jim, America's foremost harness racing horse, it was disclosed here today by E. L. Mefford, Columbus sportsman and owner of the champion trotter.

Mefford revealed that he has received numerous cabled offers but that he has refused them all.

"Lord Jim will be sold to the highest bidder," he said.

Mefford plans to put the horse on the auction block at the annual New York horse sale November 25 and it is expected that representatives of several foreign stable owners will be there prepared to bid high to take him to Europe.

Lord Jim's days as a harness racer in America are practically finished, but in Europe he would have two years of opportunity in numerous free-for-all events before being relegated to stud duty. Only a few free-for-alls have been staged in this country in recent years.

Another reason European stable owners are so anxious to secure Lord Jim, according to Mefford, is the fact that numerous trotters have been sold into export at private sales this year and Lord Jim is the only horse that has beaten them in races.

Mefford said that Lord Jim has cleaned up $25,000 in prizes in the last two years. This year, the horse won the famous Hambletonian and also the three-year-old championship crown.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

CONFERENCES BEGIN

The conferences have started and the stock question is: "How many of them will there be before contracts are signed?"—It's the Dean boys and their salaries.—Reports emanating from a meeting between Diz and Paul with President Sam Breadon, Monday, are that the big shot wants $25,000 and the younger but just as powerful sling-shotter is asking $15,000 for his second annual in the big show.

LIKE DREYFUSS

Maybe they'll get it and maybe they won't—Mr. Breadon is a tough customer, it is said, where salary boosts are to be discussed; he's even compared with the late Sam Dreyfuss, of Pittsburgh, who had his team of Waners and Traynors a few years ago playing for minor league salaries—Diz and Paul may not get the $40,000 aggregate but if Breadon doesn't come across with a neat salary then he's the meanest individual that ever scuttled a ship.

Uncle Sam & Aunt Mary

By J. W. J.

IT is to be hoped that during the progress of the Anniversary Celebration of the founding and establishment of the First Methodist church of Circleville, now going on, that a few moments may be employed in memorializing two, at least, of its pioneer, resourceful and faithful members, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Dunlap, familiarly and affectionately known as "Uncle Sam and Aunt Mary."

They were among the original promoters and builders of the present splendid edifice and probably contributed more money toward its actual construction, than any several other members of the congregation combined.

In addition and during the greater part of a quarter of a century following, their substantial support of the ministry and of the church was continuous and unfailing.

It was, perhaps, as temperance workers that these two faithful Methodists of Circleville and Pickaway-co, were best and most universally known. Mr. and Mrs. Dunlap, were among the founders of the Westerville Anti-Saloon League and made an original contribution of $5,000 toward its establishment. Other contributions from time to time and as needs became apparent, were made by these earnest reformers which probably mounted to still other thousands.

JOINED IN CAMPAIGNS

The writer had the privilege of joining with the Dunlaps in several county temperance campaigns and he knows whereof he speaks. Almost always, when the campaign had been fought through on pledges of financial support that did not materialize, Uncle Sam would produce his check-book and write a check for whatever the delinquency might amount to.

Aunt Mary was one of the founders of the Pickaway County Women's Christian Temperance Union and was its efficient and militant President until feebleness of age prevented further performance of the duties of the office. Under the fervency of her direction and management, the Pickaway White Ribboner organization became one of the most active and effective of the state; and which organization, left in the hands of Mrs. Lucy B. Price, Mrs. Abbie Gusman and other county loyal workers, continues its work of education in opposition to the degrading and destructive liquor traffic.

LEADERS SAME

Such martyr leaders, in the long drawn out campaign of putting into the federal Constitution the 18th Amendment, as Howard Russell, founder, Pearley A. Baker and Wayne B. Wheeler, coagitators and workers, came frequently to Circleville and counseled around the Dunlap fireside concerning future campaigns.

And should the Methodists now assembled in Circleville, having as their chief objective the calling to mind the memories of the past and larking back a quarter of a century and more, deem it fitting and proper to make deserving and affectionate mention of those who bore the heat and burden of the day in the establishment of Methodism and sobriety, not only in this community but in the nation at large, then the Dunlaps will not be overlooked.

"KEPT THE FAITH"

A few years, only, have elapsed since these stalwarts of local Methodism and temperance, surrendered the weapons of a carnal and consistant earthly warfare. Hand in hand they kept the faith and contended for better world conditions. And if it be true that there is prepared a Valhalla of rest and reward for those who falter not in well-doing, both in purpose and substance, then the subjects of this memoir, are in possession and enjoyment of that Elysian bliss. Such souls as those of our departed the poet must had in mind when he wrote:

'Tis a beautiful thought that no deed is lost
When done by the good and true;
Whatever its mission, whatever its cost,
Time can not its work undo;
But on and on like the censer's swing,
It moves with a wondrous power.
Till worlds unknown with its praises ring,
While wrong deeds die in an hour.

"WHY DON'T YOU CRY WITH HER, FATHER?" said Caroline

PHILIP RUTLEDGE was forced to the wall, the Rutledge fortune wiped out, the ancestral Rutledge estate put up on the auction block. But to Caroline Rutledge the catastrophe lay most of all in the revelation it gave her of her parents. Her lovely sophisticated mother, the queenly woman who moved through the high society of Europe and America with exquisite poise and assurance, was sobbing in fright. And Philip, her adored father, lord of the town, handsome, confident, seemingly a tower of strength—Philip Rutledge whined and made puny excuses and never raised a hand to restore his losses. . . . No wonder Caroline, her heart sick at the surrender of her elders, flashed at Philip "Why don't you cry with her, father. . ."

YOU'LL meet for the first time in the story of Caroline Rutledge a brand new type of modern girl who will thrill you. Caroline was brought up to have everything, to live in a world of luxury and pleasure. And now blows of fortune send her whole world crashing—force her to build a completely new life—a life for which she is wholly, utterly unprepared—a life in which everything, even love and romance, is entirely different from what she has known. Can this girl take it? See the answer in this most exciting, most timely serial romance of our day!

Monday Club Program by Blind School

The meeting of the Monday club last evening proved to be one of the most interesting and entertaining of the year.

After the business session, Mrs. John H. Dunlap Jr. presented W. G. Scarberry, superintendent of the Ohio State School for the Blind. Mr. Scarberry in a short talk said that there are 250 pupils in the school, and they are all handicapped for lack of leisure. The school is part of the public school system of the State Department of Education.

Graduates enter college from this school with no further preliminaries. From the first to the twelfth grades the literary courses are the same as in the public schools. Mr. Scarberry conceived the idea of taking some of the pupils to demonstrate to gatherings of people what is being taught in the School for the Blind and to some extend how it is being done.

He introduced Ralph Sprague, who played a piano solo and Beulah Tow, who demonstrated how to use Braille. Miss Tow read a selection from Evangeline and explained and demonstrated the use of a Braille typewriter.

Miss Ruth Williams, voice teacher, who is blind sang "Homing" and "The Swallows."

Donald Moore gave a demonstration of how mathematics is learned.

Reginald Clifton and Donald Compton played a saxaphone duet, "The Old Refrain." They were accompanied by Miss Eleanor Schmidt, head of the Department of Music at the school.

Mr. McCauley, head of the Industrial Department, outlined the courses offered along this line.

Hugh Wendell sang a group of baritone solos, "On the Road to Mandalay" and "Tom's Wooing."

Mary Ella Bush, a little girl about ten years of age, gave a demonstration of how geography is learned. Mary Ella's familiarity with a map of Europe and her ability to trace her way on the map from the Adriatic sea to the Black sea would put to shame a good many children as well as grown-ups with two perfectly good eyes.

A vocal duet "The Night Hymn at Sea" by Miss Williams and Mr. Wendell closed the program.

Mr. Scarberry extended an invitation to every one in the community to visit the school at any time.

Combined Choirs Please Large Church Gathering

WASHINGTON, C. H., Nov. 6.—Another triumph was scored by the combined choirs of the First Presbyterian Church, Grace M. E. Church, Church of Christ and First Baptist Church, Sunday night in the third annual concert of sacred songs, given at Grace church under the skillful direction of Ralph Lloyd, the choirs appearing under auspices of the Cecilian Music Club to whom the community is indebted for organizing the big chorus which has proven so popular and brought enjoyment to so many in this and adjoining cities during the past three years.

The concert was in the nature of a union meeting of the four churches, with the public invited, and in addition to the several hundred people from this city, a great many came from the county at large, and from Greenfield, Wilmington, Sabina, New Holland, Chillicothe, Circleville and other points.

REHEARSE WEEKS

For several weeks the choirs had been rehearsing for the concert, first under the directors of the respective choirs, and later under direction of Mr. Lloyd, so that their careful training was apparent throughout the concert, and the choir director, the individual members of the big choir and the supporting musicians acquitted themselves with first honors, their work being praiseworthy for its excellence.

It was necessary to greatly enlarge the choir loft for the three score members of the big vested choir, so that all might be comfortably seated.

For the first time in this city the stirring strains of "Pomp And Circumstance," the choir processional, added impressiveness as the choir filed in from the rear of the church and found their places on the platform, the processional being played by Miss Marian Christopher, whose work as accompanist throughout the concert was praised generally. Miss Minnie M. Light organist of Grace church played the organ prelude and Mrs. Lillie G. Davis, organist of the First Presbyterian Church, was at the organ for the offertory. Miss Mildred Steffy, of the Church of Christ, and Miss Elizabeth Godfrey, of the First Baptist Church, were at the piano.

The four ministers of the churches participated in the services, Rev. J. A. Goddard, as a member of the choir; Rev. W. H. Wilson reading the Scriptures, Rev. J. Stanley Mitchell offering prayer, and Rev. A. K. Wilson pronouncing the benediction.

The ease with which the choir members found their places, their united action in arising and taking their seats, turning their music, and in fact every phase of their work, showed careful training at the hands of Mr. Lloyd, which added effectiveness to their singing.

The harmony, shading, interpretation and in every phrase of the singing reflected their careful training and splendid individual work, all combining to bring great pleasure to the large and appreciative audience, a great many of whom showered the director and choir with praise at the conclusion of the concert, a large number declaring the concert the best of the series of three.

Adding much to the concert was the notable work of Mrs. Lois Maurer and M. E. Myers, soloists, whose singing was outstanding and very effective. Mrs. Maurer, with her beautiful, high soprano, took the solo part in "O Lord Most Holy" and "A Rose of Sharon," a breathless hush falling over the audience while she sang the latter, a favorite among the sacred songs. Mr. Myers, who possess a rich baritone voice, had the solo part in "Give Unto The Lord."

The choirs will appear at the Circleville Methodist church next Sunday at 4 o'clock to climax a celebration.

Insurance of Deposits

IN the proposal of Mr. Crowley for a change in the system of federal deposit insurance which he administers, conservative bankers as well as others whose concern is for our banking system will find reassurance. The insurrance at present is limited in the amount of $5,000 for each account, but that is merely the prelude to a plan which, under existing law, would come into effect next year. It calls for the full insurance of all deposits up to $10,000, insurance up to 75 per cent of those between that figure and $50,000, and up to 50 per cent in excess of $50,000.

In his address before the bankers Mr. Crowley proposed that the present maximum of $5,000 be continued as a permanent policy and that a definite limit be placed on the extent to which sound banks may be assessed in order to pay off depositors in institutions which have failed. If this recommendation is approved by congress when it reconvenes, the insurance plan will be greatly strengthened and that phase of it which has caused conservative bankers most concern will be corrected.

Though opposed in principle to government insurance schemes, many of these bankers have accepted the present limited plan as a necessary measure, in view of the severe blow dealt to public confidence by the bank panic of February-March, 1933. What they have strongly criticized has been the unlimited liability which would be imposed on conservatively managed institutions by the more ambitious plan due to take effect next year.

That the administration is now prepared to scrap this plan in favor of the existing system offers further evidence of its willingness to consider the bankers' point of view. The change can be made without detriment to the interest of the small depositor. For, as Mr. Crowley pointed out, a guarantee up to $5,000 fully protects 97 out of every 100 insured depositors.

CAROLINE // by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

CHAPTER 1

WHEN Caroline was growing up her lovely mother used to say to her with an air of delicate reproof: "You sprawl so, dear."

"But Mummy, it's a sprawly house," Caroline had once answered. A few years later she knew that she had meant it was a gracious house.

Colonial and old. Built by the founder of the family fortune, of the town's chief industry, and the co-educational university. Other charming suburban residences had been erected on the 6-road acres that composed the original Rutledge homestead, but none were so authentic, so hospitable or so popular.

In the early days of the town's history the house had been the gathering place of the serious-minded, the leaders in church and politics, the elite of the artistic.

Today the college crowd—Caroline's friends—owned it. Her father, Philip Rutledge, paid the taxes and the bills, but it was open house to flocks of light-hearted revelers who, according to the servants, were in and out at all hours of the day and night.

Caroline loved it, the house, the gayety, her leadership. It seemed all hers. An only child, she had never brought to her glamorous mother a definite sense of maternal responsibility. Mrs. Rutledge had for years spent most of her time abroad. Mr. Rutledge and Caroline preferred to stay at home. Mr. Rutledge practically lived at his clubs.

The depression washed up like a tidal wave and destroyed the security of many homes in the neighborhood. Hawthorn House stood like a bulwark, but Caroline's followers diminished somewhat in numbers as the semesters ended and the calls to come home came in to some of the students from distant parts. A few among the local residents were lost to her, but those who remained in her "set" felt safe, realized little of what was going on in the world.

No great sums were needed by them for their good times; apparently their parents were carrying on as usual and at Hawthorn House everything was as it always had been. Good cheer in plenty.

The entertaining in other homes gradually fell off; the hospitality at Hawthorn House increased. Mr. Rutledge never faced the issue of mounting expenses, telling himself that things cost less now and letting it go at that—just as he avoided facing issues at his factory by spending his time in his clubs.

In April Mrs. Rutledge returned from abroad. The boat trip had been a bore, people talked incessantly of the bad times. Alva Rutledge suspected that most of them were coming back because of lack of funds to continue away from home. For the first time in her inconsequential life she thought of money, glad that the family fortune was well rooted in an established industry. People would always want soap and cosmetics, she assured herself.

Mr. Rutledge did not meet her in New York. Undoubtedly he was too busy at the factory, she thought.

It was good to be at home. She enjoyed having Caroline's gay friends in the house after that dreary boat. Caroline was delighted with her mother. Surely no other mother had ever been so alluringly beautiful.

"You're about the only old lady my friends would stand for, darling," she told Alva soberly.

Alva Rutledge shuddered, protested the description.

"But that's just what I mean," Caroline exclaimed. "You make us forget that you're not of our generation. You'll never age. You're divine, Mother, especially in that yellow negligee."

"Silly. Will you take these popovers down and tell Anna I want Melba toast? I wonder why she forgot. Is she getting careless?"

Caroline took up the covered dish. "Even Anna thinks you could never be anything but ravishing no matter what you ate," she said. "But don't run any risks today. I want you to look your loveliest this afternoon. There'll be hundreds of people."

"Good gracious. How do you feed them?"

"Well, then, dozens. And it's a cocktail party. Nothing to eat but canapes. You brought some new recipes for Anna, didn't you?"

"Nothing new. Tell her to wrap stuffed olives with bacon and grill them."

Caroline said: "They're crazy about them," and started to leave the room. Her mother called to her. "What are you wearing?" she asked.

"Black."

Alva shook her head. "Because you have auburn hair like mine?"

Caroline looked at her mother's waves of burnished gold. "Have I really hair like that?" she asked.

"Exactly. And it's not the shade for black with a skin as fair as yours. Haven't you anything in a soft gray?"

"I can get it. Jeanne is showing gray. I wanted to ask you first."

Her mother smiled. "Only because I've just come from Paris, no?"

"You know you wanted me to think for myself," Caroline reminded her.

"Yes." Alva admitted with a faint little sigh. "To avoid friction. You are much like your Grandfather Rutledge. Your father and I are different. It would not be easy to think for you."

"You and Father are adorable. Grandfather Rutledge was stubborn."

"Don't criticize him child. He'd be proud of you. You have the Rutledge eyes."

A smoldering expression appeared in the girl's clear amber-brown orbs. She was remembering resentfully that her paternal grandfather had never been fond of her fascinating mother.

Alva understood. She smiled tolerantly. "I suppose I am the orchid he used to call me," she said. "And I never knew until he told me, that an orchid is a parasite. Your father was annoyed with him and made it up to me with a present so naturally I used to torment him into calling me an orchid as frequently as I could."

"If I were as beautiful as you I shouldn't care what anyone called me," Caroline insisted.

"Run along for my toast," her mother urged, and wondered if all the mirrors in the house were false, for truly Caroline was more beautiful than she. The Rutledge eyes—that amazingly clear brown.

She reached out and picked up a hand-mirror from a stand by her bed. No, her eyes were not so good a brown, but . . . She shrugged. Of course, the Rutledge blood would dominate in her child the charm that was hers. This charm had come to her from her own father, a Southern gentleman as irrepressibly a devotee to love of life as Grandfather Rutledge had been a rock-ribbed realist.

She thought of her sister Fern, so like their colorless mother. Poor Fern. Well, at least Caroline was beautiful and sweet. Possibly a girl who was only touched with Rutledge realism could feel joy at least to the extent of making life worth living. It had hardly been so for Grandfather Rutledge. With him it was a grim-mouthed endurance test. She hoped Caroline would never get to be like that, and turned her thoughts to consideration of a dance she must give for Caroline soon—a dance with talent from New York—something to remind the town that she was again in residence at Hawthorn House. And incidentally, to announce the girl's engagement.

No shadow of depression here. Music, laughter, soft lights.

Caroline's party that afternoon was handled entirely by Caroline. Her mother took no part in it until she came down to join the guests, refreshed, sparklingly animated and simply shimmering in beauty and cool green silk.

Everything was lovely. "The child really is capable," Alva thought, and wished she felt happier about it.

It was a cool spring day. Backlogs held the fires in the fireplaces. Daffodils were all about. Carpets were rolled up and out of the way. The big chairs wore new English chintz—she had sent it over herself, a color to match the gowns she wore. A pretty maid who looked as though she would like to share in the dancing passed plates of hot olives and salted almonds, but the guests themselves served the cocktails.

No shadow of depression here. Music, laughter, soft lights. The tinkle of ice, couples lost in rhythmic abandon, young men bringing in tall silver shakers with which they described fanciful arcs in the air with an energy that seemed tireless.

Later there was a bit of clowning, an extemporized adagio dance, an imitation of Beatrice Lille, laughter a little louder, and one girl that sulked because she said Caroline had no right to be engaged to Howard Dunsworth. Everyone condoled with her in an amusing fashion, but Alva wondered. Howard was not finding it funny. He didn't like it. His uneasiness brought Alva at last to studying the girl. She saw, or thought she saw, a real feeling behind the confessed pique.

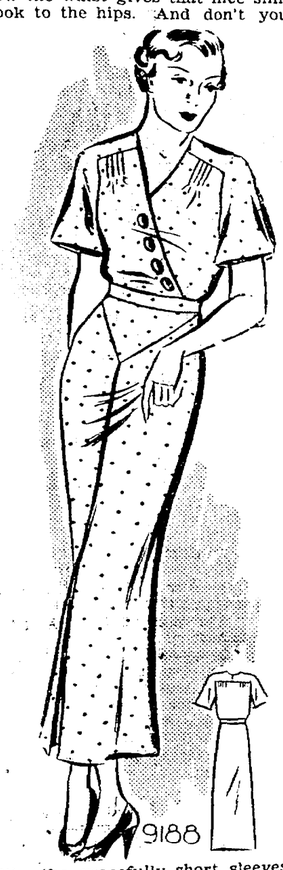
PATTERN 9188

Here is a house frock, every line of which has been thought out carefully to make a slenderizing design for the more matronly figure. Notice how the flattering surplice closing is emphasized by chic buttons and how the point below the waist gives that nice slim look to the hips. And don't you like the gracefully short sleeves? They are cut full enough to permit freedom of action when you are zipping about your housewifely duties. The skirt boasts a perky kick pleat for the same purpose. Choose a dainty cotton fabric for this design—a dark blue or dark green with white pin dots would be a slimming color choice.



Pattern 9188 may be ordered only in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards 36 inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for EACH MARIAN MARTIN pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE of each pattern.

SELF-ARRESTING DRUNK

BRIDGEWATER, Mass. — Joseph Jozack told police over the telephone they had better arrest him, because he was drunk. Five hours later he called up again to find out why no policeman had come to arrest him. Chief James R. Moore informed him if he wanted to be arrested, he should come to the police station. So two hours later, Jozack arrived at the station, and was locked up.

Suffered From Hives For Seventeen Years

Authority Tells of an Unusual Case in Discussing Causes and Cure of This Ailment

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

URTICARIA or hives, as it is more commonly called, is often one of the most difficult problems the physician faces. In a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical association there was reported a case of hives of seventeen years' duration which had resisted every effort at cure. The underlying cause was finally discovered and the sufferer relieved of his annoying affliction.

Of course, this was an unusual case. As a rule, most cases are simple and clear up within a short time. Yet many times the trouble is stubborn and difficult to cure. Hives cause a great deal of embarrassment and suffering.

This ailment is due to a peculiar sensitivity to some substance or substances. These offending substances may be in the food or clothing, associated with the home surroundings or materials used in work. The sufferer soon solves his peculiar weakness and avoids contact with the offending material. But, as I have implied, it is often difficult to determine what causes the sensitivity. Until this is known, little hope for cure or relief can be offered the victim.

The trouble takes the form of firm, whitish patches on the skin. They appear suddenly and only after contact with the irritating substance. These swellings or wheals may become as large as a fifty-cent piece. They itch and burn and sting. Sometimes they are mistaken for mosquito bites, which they closely resemble.

Methods of Treatment

Temporary relief can be obtained by the application of calamine lotion or the use of a solution of hyposulphite of soda. When the eruption covers the entire body soothing results are obtained by bathing in a tub to which large quantities of baking soda have been added.

Permanent relief can be obtained by finding the offending substance and eradicating it from the life of the patient. Hives is often encountered in occupations where the worker is exposed to certain chemicals, wood or materials. Cure is possible only by change of occupation.

Often the sensitivity is due to a food poisoning such as the protein from some other outside source. Just as in the case of asthma, the offending protein can be determined by special skin tests. After the substance has been discovered it is often possible to correct the sensitivity by the use of special vaccines.

Hives may be the result of faulty hygienic habits. Victims of this disturbance should avoid any tendency to constipation. They should drink at least six to eight glasses of water every day. An abundance of fresh air and sunlight, well balanced meals and adequate hours of rest and relaxation, are other factors that must not be overlooked.

Answers to Health Queries

Mrs. A. Q.—Is there any cure for swollen veins except having injections?

A.—If the varicose veins are slight, bandaging or wearing an elastic stocking is often effective. For full particulars restate your question and send a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Mrs. H. E. Q.—What would you advise for a child who fusses and cries without much cause. He seems to be nervous and when he sleeps he moves his hands and fingers?

A.—It is possible that the child has intestinal worms. For full particulars restate your question and send a stamped self-addressed envelope.

S. S. Q.—I have large tonsils. Will this hinder or prevent my growth in any way?

A.—If tonsils are enlarged and diseased, they are injurious to the health and should be removed.

A Reader. Q.—What would cause a continual weak, sick feeling in the stomach?

A.—This may be due to "biliousness". First correct the diet, avoiding an excess of sweets, starches, coffee and tea. Your trouble may also be due to some underlying disturbance. I would suggest that you consult your family doctor.

be diverted from private industry and trade.

The inevitable result of this, of course, would be to create more unemployment, who in turn would join EPIC resulting in still further loss to industry, and so on and on until the whole industrial structure would go bankrupt.

Ohio's plan avoids this destructive circle.

It does not insulate the unemployed in a separate economy. Under the Buckeye formula money spent for relief is not affected by what the unemployed produce.

The dozen idle factories leased by the State, and manned by unemployed, produce certain goods and edibles which are used to supplement the relief extended to the workless. Cash relief remains the same.

Furthermore, the State is under specific pledge that if a factory can be returned to profitable private manufacture, it is given back. Also, if a leased factory worker declines a job from a private employer, he is discharged from the state-operated plant.

MOVIES

AT THE GRAND

The last scene filmed on Joe E. Brown's new First National comedy, "The Circus Clown," now showing at the Grand Theatre, is the first to be seen when the picture is flashed on the screen.

It is generally known that motion pictures are not filmed in the continuity of the story, but this marks the first actual case when the final scene photographed is the first scene in the film.

The reason for this peculiar arrangement is quite simple. One of the earlies' sequences in the picture reveals Joe as a circus performer of yesteryear, with the short-cropped haircut in favor at that time.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Perhaps it is sheer genius, or perhaps it is that unusual compatibility that exists between actress Elizabeth Bergner and director-husband Paul Czinner that makes their work together so unfailingly successful.

Miss Bergner makes her debut before American screen audiences in "Catherine the Great," the London Films production in which she is co-starred with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

Critics both here and abroad have acclaimed her work in the United Artists release, which comes to the Cliftona Theatre Wednesday and Thursday, comprising one of the finest characterizations ever seen on the screen, and, without in any way detracting from her genius as an actress, are quite definite in their praise of Czinner's subtle and understanding direction.

DOKE TELLS STORY, CONFIDENT IN CELL

WOODLAND, Cal., Nov. 6.—Confident of an acquittal, Judson C. Doke, 34, rested in his county jail cell here today from the ordeal of testifying in his own behalf to a charge of murdering Lamar Hollingshead, 23, college student and poet who was carrying on a torrid love affair with Doke's pretty young "white hibiscus" wife, Helen Louise Doke.

"I concealed nothing," said the square-jawed handsome defendant, "and I'm sure the jury will send me back into the world so I may take up my life where it was cut short by this tragedy. I didn't mean to kill Hollingshead and I am not guilty of murder under any interpretation."

Doke testified he went to a cabin in a wheatfield where Hollingshead was working, exchanged the poet's letters to Mrs Doke for the ones she had written Hollingshead and then fired the fatal shot when Hollingshead refused to write a statement that his love for Mrs. Doke was only physical.

The poet started to write, Doke said, and then jumped up and cried, "I'll be damned if I will; you can shoot me."

DEMOS. GAIN BY 2 VOTES

NEW ASHFORD, Mass., Nov. 6.—Maintaining its record for being the first town in the United States to report a complete vote in the elections, this Berkshire hills community today showed a Democratic increase by two votes.

Figures in the gubernatorial race were:

Bacon (R) 22,
Curley (D) 10,
Goodwin (Ind) 1,

This compared with the 1922 vote for governor of:

Youngman (R) 23,
Ely (D) 8,

Curley gained two votes over Ely's total of 1932, while Bacon lost 1. There were 36 votes cast this year, as against 33 in 1932.

The senatorial figures this year were:

Walsh (D) 19,
Washburn (R) 13,

This compared with the 1932 vote for the United States senator:

Butler (R) 29,
Coolidge (D) 4.

When the polls opened shortly before 6 a. m., about 20 voters who had come from their homes in outlying sections by automobile, were already gathered there. The first voter to cast a ballot was Miss Phoebe Jordan, 65, the town's oldest voter, and up to three years ago a staunch Republican and chairman of the Republican town committee.

Fog banks encircled the town as the first voters arrived and when the total electriate had cast ballots at 6:32 a. m., and the count began, it began to rain hard. The polls were kept open under state law until 9:45 a. m.

Following tabulation of the vote, State Senator Thomas J. Plunkett (R) who is seeking re-election, gave the whole town a breakfast in the schoolhouse.

total of 2,700,000 voters would go to the polls.

In Franklin-co returns were expected to come in slowly because of the vast amount of tabulating to be done. Each voter here was handed eight ballots, which if 130,000 persons vote, would entail the counting of over a million ballots.

Besides the regular party and judiciary tickets here, the ballots included an assortment of bond issues, the constitutional amendments, initiated ordinances, school levy and a county charter proposal.

In Cleveland each voter received four ballots. Since the voters there appear to be chiefly interested in who will be the new sheriff, the county was expected to break no speed records in completing the count for U. S. senator and state offices.

With the Democrats pinning their hope of electing Martin L. Davey governor on the majority they expect to receive for him in Cuyahoga-co, it may take the complete vote there to definitely decide whether Davey or Clarence J. Brown, Republican, is the winner.

RACE FOR

Third and Ninth districts, respectively. In the Eighth, Gertrude Jones, Findlay Republican, only woman in any of the races, was said to have gained much ground from Congressman Brooks Fletcher, Democrat.

While the Democratic state command optimistically predicted the election of all 24 of its congressional candidates, it would consider the day's work well done if Fess is defeated even though there are a few lower house casualties.

CREDITED SERVICE

But Donahey's stand on the President's policies caused the Democratic organization much uneasiness. Never an "organization" man, he won the nomination hands down from Gov. George White, then in control of the state organization, and from Congressman West who was persistently reported to have tacit endorsement of the national administration.

Donahey made few campaign speeches, but in each he praised the President's sincerity of purpose and credited him with rendering "well nigh unparalleled service to his country since March 4, 1933."

So far so good, thought the party leaders, but Donahey invariably wound up his addresses by promising to "support the President, in every proper way." Those last four words never failed to irritate 100 per cent "New Dealers" who are without an expression from him on many vital phases of the recovery program.

Neither Fess nor Donahey personally abused the other, but the hectic gubernatorial contest found every known political weapon employed, including race and religious prejudice. Even the Ku Klux Klan, once a powerful factor in Ohio politics, again reared its head.

Neither Brown nor Davey offered a solution for the state's critical financial problem, leaving that to be worked out by the legislature. In order to provide operating revenue for schools and local governments until a new tax program can be worked out and put into effect, Davey proposed a 2-year moratorium on principal payments of subdivision bonds.

Branded "repudiation" by many financial authorities but stoutly defended by Davey who shouted that "no one has offered anything better," the moratorium was seized upon by Brown as a major campaign issue. He said it would ruin Ohio's credit, but pointed out that whatever benefits might be derived from it would have to await acceptance of the moratorium by the legislature.

ON SCHOOL ISSUE

The most forceful policy declaration by Brown was his "unalterable opposition" to granting state aid to parochial or private schools. Unwilling to state publicly whether he was for or against parochial school aid, Davey was accused by Brown of "trying to carry water on both shoulders." He in turn cried that the Republican candidate was stirring up religious prejudices.

A highlight of the gubernatorial campaign was the attack on Davey for alleged financial transactions of himself and companies. It was delivered and repeated by Paul M. Herbert, G. O. P. candidate for lieutenant governor, who charged that Davey "circumvented the law." This brought forth from Davey a defense of his bank dealings, the statement that all loans in anyway connected with his name were "amply secured by collateral," and finally a promise to sue Herbert and the Republican campaign committee for libel after the election.

Herbert's Democratic opponent in today's election is State Sen. Harold G. Mosier, Cleveland, author of the Ohio liquor control act and son-in-law of State Supreme Court Justice Thomas A. Jones, a Republican.

Contests for attorney general, secretary of state and state treasurer found the same opponents who fought them out two years ago competing again. George S. Myers, Cleveland Democrat, sought re-election as secretary of state, opposed by Tax Commissioner George C. Braden, Warren Republican. Attorney General John W. Bricker, Columbus Republican, asked to be re-elected over Herbert S. Duffey, Columbus Democrat. Harry S. Day, Fremont Republican, sought re-election as state treasurer over Joseph T. Ferguson, Barberton Democrat.

VOTE ON JUSTICES

An unprecedented number of supreme court justices will be elected, two for full 6-year terms, one for a term expiring Dec. 31, 1936, and two for short terms expiring Dec. 31, 1934.

Full term contests found Charles B. Zimmerman incumbent, and N. Craig McBride, Hillsboro, Democrats, pitted against Frank W. Geiger, state utilities commissioner, Springfield, and Arthur H. Day, Cleveland, Republicans.

Judge Howard L. Bevis, Cincinnati Democrat, hoped to be continued as the successor to Judge R. R. Kinkade, who resigned a year ago. His Republican opponent was Roy H. Williams, Sandusky.

Republican candidates for the two short terms were W. F. Carver, Millersburg, and R. M. Winegardner, of McConnelsville. They were opposed by William L. Hart, Alliance, and Willis H. Liggett, Columbus, Republicans.

The short term vacancies occurred as a result of the death of Judge Robert H. Day, Massillon, and the resignation of Judge Florence Allen, now a federal jurist. Appointive incumbents are Judge Zimmerman and Judge Robert N. Wilkin, Dover Democrat, defeated by McBride in the primary.

Velocity of a River

Swift streams are not as easily turned aside from their course as slow ones and hence the former maintain straighter courses. The velocity of a river depends on the difference in altitude between the source and the mouth, also on the distance which separates them, as this determines the grade. The volume of water is also an important factor.

ings "cold blooded murder" while Attorney General William A. Schnader, Republican candidate for governor, promised a full investigation.

The dead were:

Frank Fiolla, 65, Kelayres, shot dead in the street, and John Golosky, 28, of McAdoo, and William Forte, 35, of McAdoo Heights, who died in the Hazelton hospital of their wounds:

Also in the hospital and expected to die were:

Andry Kotishion, 36, of Lofty, and Dominick Perna, 35, of Kelayres.

Ten other persons, five of them women, were in the Hazelton hospital with less serious wounds.

CALL STATE POLICE

Threats to burn and dynamite the Bruno homes were shouted by the crowd of marchers as the dead, dying and wounded were borne away from the wild scene here last night but state police, hurriedly summoned from Harrisburg, held the crowd in check.

Feeling was intense today in this little community of 600 inhabitants as state police held the Bruno families for questioning.

The parade wound its way through the borough last night as the climax to a Democratic rally by which the leaders hoped to tear the mining community from the Bruno Republican factions who have held control for several years.

As the marchers approached a church, a deadly leaden stream of bullets poured from the second floor of one house and the third floor of the dwelling on the opposite side of the street. The victims were caught in the crossfire.
